Consumer Price Index jumps in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher prices for food and gasoline pushed the nation's Consumer Price Index up eight-tenths of one per cent in June, double the May increase and the highest monthly jump in consumer prices since last September, the Labor Department reported today.

Food prices increased 1.5 per cent in June, the largest increase since last September when the increase was 1.6 per cent, and the price of food in grocery stores rose 1.9 per cent, the department said.

Over-all food price increases were less than the hike at the supermarket because the reported two-tenths of one per cent rise in restaurant meals held the total down slightly, a department spokesman explained.

Among increases, meat prices were reported up 5.8 per cent and prices of fruits and vegetables rose 2.4 per cent.

The price of gasoline was listed as up three per cent to an average of nearly 57 cents a gallon for regular and 60 cents a gallon for premium, compared to 55 cents for regular in May and 59 cents for premium. Gasoline prices have risen even further since information was gathered for the June price index.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said the real spendable earnings of workers declined an average four-tenths of one per cent in June compared with a 4.7 per cent increase in May. For the year, the Labor Department said real earnings of workers were down by four-tenths of a per cent.

The Consumer Price Index in June stood at 160.6 per cent of the 1967 average of 100. Ths meant it cost $160.60 to buy a statistical sample of goods that cost $100 in the base period. For the 12 month period ending in June, consumer prices rose 9.3 per cent, slightly below the inflation rates of last year.

The size of the June increase appeared to catch administration economists by surprise. They had expected some increase, especially in the food and fuel area, but there were no predictions that prices would increase as much as reported.

If the June increase were continued over an entire year, that would be an annual inflation rate of about 9.5 per cent. The May increase of four-tenths of one per cent, if continued for a year, would have led to a rate of about five per cent.

The figures in the Labor Department report were adjusted for seasonal variations. But even on an unadjusted basis, over-all consumer prices were up the same, eight-tenths of one per cent, officials said.

In the category of nonfood commodities, which includes such consumer goods as furniture, appliances, and fuels, prices rose five-tenths of one per cent, up from two-tenths of a per cent in May. Nearly half of this increase was due to the higher gasoline prices, the Labor Department said.

Prices of services rose seven-tenths of one per cent in June, up from two-tenths of one per cent in May, largely because of an increase in home mortgage interest rates after six consecutive months of decline, the department reported.

There also were reported large increases for natural gas, electricity, telephone service, hospital charges and physician fees.

Used car prices rose sharply, up 3.7 per cent from May

There were decreases in most transportation costs and in prices of some foods, especially sugar, the Labor Department said.

The increase in consumer prices in June of eight-tenths of one per cent compared with an increase in June of last year of nine-tenths of one per cent.

The Ford administration maintains that its energy program will add about 2 per cent to the Consumer Price Index if and when the program is fully enforced. The recent increases in the price of gasoline of about 3 cents a gallon are expected to add at least two-tenths of 1 per cent to the index.

But government economists say there is little danger in the near future of any return to the double-digit inflation rates of 1974, when over-all consumer prices increased 12 per cent.

Meanwhile, the Council on Wage and Price Stability continued its hearings into recently announced increases in aluminum prices of about 2.5 per cent.

Although major aluminium producers have postponed the increases until after the current public hearings, President Cornell C. Maier of Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. said Monday that increased profits in the industry are necessary to prevent a future shortage of aluminum.

But council director Albert Rees said that while he did not challenge the industry's claim that costs have risen substantially since its last price increase, he is fearful the increases in the aluminum industry could set off a chain reaction of price increases in other industries that could impede the recovery from recession.

Farm tour to focus on SeMo

Attention of agricultural leaders from throughout Missouri will be focused on the Southeast area of the state on July 29, 30, and 31 for the 1975 "Spotlight on Agriculture" Tour.

The tour is conducted by the Governor's Advisory Council to draw attention to agricultural issues in a different area of the state each year. Missouri's agricultural production exhibits a great variety of farming enterprises. The 1975 tour will serve to acquaint agricultural leaders and Missouri citizens with the diversified farming operation in the Southeast area.

Director of Agriculture, James B. Boillot, and members of the Governor's Advisory Council on Agriculture will tour livestock, crop, and fruit operations in St. Francois, Madison, Washington, Wayne, Butler, Dunklin, Stoddard, Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid, and Pemiscot counties.

The tour will begin at 1 p.m. on July 29 at the Trail Tree Farm near Irondale. Gov. ChristopherS. Bond will join the tour at 1 p.m. on July 31 at the University of Missouri Delta Research Center near Portageville. Area residents are invited to meet with the Governor and members of the advisory council at the Delta Center to discuss current agricultural issues.

The Governor and members of the council will tour the following operations the afternoon of July 31: Radcliffe

3 radios are stolen

The theft of three radios was reported today by police.

A citizens band radio was taken from an automobile belonging to Mid Delta Agency Inc., while it was parked at the Blair Moran home, 728 Park Ave. The theft occurred between Friday and Sunday.

The radio was valued at $150.

A radio belonging to Billy Paylor, Route Four, was taken Friday from a home at 806 Lake St., while Paylor was painting the house.

Paylor said the radio was taken when he walked around to another side of the house and was out of sight of the radio. The radio was valued at $200.

A police band scanner was taken from a car belonging to James Statler, 900 Vernon St., while the car was parked at his house.

The theft occurred sometime Sunday or Monday, police said.

The radio was valued at $209.

Chaffee schedules vote

CHAFFEE — A special election for mayor will be held on Sept. 17, the City Council decided Monday after considering the amount of time candidates would need to file and campaign for the office in accordance with Missouri law which requires that three weeks must be allowed for filing and another three weeks from the filing deadline before the election.

The vacancy in the office was created by the recent death of Les D. Lankford, who was elected mayor in the April 1 general election.

The first reading of an ordinance proposing a one-cent city sales tax was approved by the council. The ordinance must have three readings before it can be put before the people for a vote.

The tax would be levied on all tangible personal property sold by retail merchants and all personal services.

A simple majority of the voters must approve the tax before it can be adopted, and 10 days after adoption, a copy of the ordinance must be sent to the state director of revenue.

The new tax rate (including the three-cent state tax) would be as follows: 0-12 cents, no tax; 12-31 cents, one cent in tax; 32-54 cents, two cents tax; 55-81 cents, three cents tax; 82-$1.08, four cents tax; $1.09-$1.35, five cents tax; and $1.36-$1.62, six cents tax. For each additional twenty-five cents, a one-cent tax would be added.

Any retail business not complying with the tax, if passed could be sued by the city.

In other business, the old dog control ordinance was repealed in favor of a more stringent one providing a fine for dog owners not complying with city law concerning dogs.

The council is checking into the possibility of securing Blue Cross-Blue Shield insurance coverage for city employes and council members. The city would pick up 50 per cent of the cost of the insurance.

The council voted to blacktop Coxhill Road to the bridge that marks the city limits.

U.N. appeals to Sadat to keep peace force

By The Associated Press

United Nations diplomats were hopeful today that an appeal sent by the Security Council would prompt Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to agree to continuation of the U.N. Emergency Force in Sinai.

Some expressed belief that he would reply by nightfall, perhaps in a scheduled Cairo speech, and that the Council could go to work to renew the mandate of the buffer force, which expires Thursday.

Sadat also is expected to announce in the speech whether the U.S.-led efforts to agree on a second withdrawal from Sinai have succeeded.

The U.N. appeal, adopted 13 to 0 Monday night, was that Sadat "reconsider the attitude of Egypt" on extension of the mandate on grounds it would help create "an atmosphere conducive to progress toward agreement on a just and lasting peace."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy had notified the United Nations a week ago that Egypt did not consent to an extension because Israel was misusing the 3,919-man force to perpetuate the occupation of Arab lands and the state of "no war, no peace."

House leaders to discuss energy with President

WASHINGTON (AP) — House leaders arranged today to discuss energy legislation with President Ford Wednesday, but apparently it will not be until after the House kills his plan to phase out oil price controls over 30 months.

A vote on Ford's plan was expected later in the day.

On a related energy matter, it appeared no attempt would be made in the House to override Ford's veto of a bill Monday that would have provided more oil price controls.

Speaker Carl Albert, who told reporters of the White House meeting, said the vetoed bill probably would be sent to the House Commerce Committee, an indication the leadership doubts it can muster the two-thirds majority needed to override.

Ford's plan to phase out oil price controls could be killed by disapproval from either branch of Congress.

"Both the President and Congress are playing great defensive games," said Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex. "It's the third quarter and the score is zero-zero."

Wright, head of the House Democratic task force t devel-op a party policy on energy, said one of the major problems is that even if the House leadership could hammer out a compromise with the White House there is no assurance that the House members would vote for it.

Albert also acknowledged that Congress and administration energy representatives have not come up with a bill "that will fly."

Both Albert and Wright said the main snags include how high to set the price cap on domestic crude oil and how long it should take to phase out price controls.

One of the possibilities, said Wright, is to phase out price controls over a 36-month period and to place a $13.50 a barrel price ceiling on so-called new oil. There is also talk of a $2 a barrel tax on domestic crude oil.

Asked about possibilities that Ford could call Congress back into session to act on energy during its August vacation, Albert replied:

"If we have presidential spite on top of presidential veto, we will have no government around here at all."

Under the administration's plan, old oil — the 60 per cent of U.S. oil that now has a price ceiling of $5.25 a barrel — would gradually be allowed to rise in price until the end of the 30-month period. Then it would be free of controls and sold at world prices, which now are around $13 a barrel.

The Ford administration claims the President's plan would produce a 7-cent-a-gallon boost in gasoline prices by the end of 1977. However, some Democratic critics argue the hike would be 15 cents a gallon.

The U.S. oil that now has no price controls, so-called "new oil," would have come under an $11.25 ceiling in the bill that Ford vetoed Monday.

Ford said he vetoed the measure because it failed to encourage greater U.S. oil production and thus encouraged U.S. reliance on imported oil.

Meantime, Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb prompted speculation that a compromise was being worked out between the administration and Congress. Zarb said Monday that he met with some congressmen during the weekend and again on Monday to talk about differences on energy policy.

3 injured in SeMo accidents

A man and two young women were injured in two traffic accidents on Southeast Missouri roads Monday, the highway patrol reported today.

John Montgomery, 52, of Caruthersville received possible back and neck injuries in an automobile-train accident at 11:50 a.m. Monday.

The accident occurred when Montgomery failed to see the flashing lights at a railroad crossing and his car was struck by a Frisco train engineered by W. W. Rhodes of Chaffee.

The accident occurred four miles east of Wardell on Route A.

A three-car accident at 4:25 p.m. on Route M in Butler County four miles west of Highway 67 injured two young Poplar Bluff women.

The incident occurred when Anthony Ray Litpoldt, 18, of Burbank, Calif., attempted to stop after his eastbound car blew a radiator hose. As the Litpoldt car slowed down, it was struck from behind by a car driven east by Cherie Kay Lawson, 17, of Poplar Bluff which had just come over the top of a hill. The Lawson car then was struck in the side by a westbound car driven by Cozzie Ann Carrillo, 20, of Poplar Bluff.

The two young women received minor injuries and were taken to the Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Driver blinded, hits 2 girls

NEW MADRID — Two 11-year-old girls, Jennifer Jackson and Sarah Masterson, were injured when struck by a car about 9:30 p.m. Monday as they were walking in the 1200 block of Davis Street near the Masterson home, according to police.

The girls were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston, where the Jackson girl was treated for scratches and abrasions on her back and released. The Masterson girl remained in the hospital for observation of a lump on her head.

Police said the accident occurred when the driver of a westbound car, James Ford, 16, of New Madrid, was blinded by lights from an oncoming car and did not see the girls in time to avoid striking them. Ford applied his brakes and the car skidded about 20 feet before hitting the girls, police said.

Ford and a passenger, Billie Masterson, were not injured.

Waste collection service hits snag

DEXTER — The solid waste collection service which went into effect in Dexter early this month has run into problems, Mayor Willis Conner told the City Council Monday night.

The contract with Woods Sanitation requires either curb service or alley service, he said, but not both.

In some areas of the city citizens have been putting their trash along the street while others have placed theirs in the alley. Conner said that in some cases where more containers have been placed along the street than in the alley, the collection agency has skipped the alley and made the pickups on the street.

Conner instructed the aldermen to talk with the citizens in their wards. "Let's try to resolve these things," he said. "If a greater number of people require street pickup, then let's go to that. By next meeting, let's resolve it one way or another."

In residential areas where alley pickup is desired, service will still be provided.

Another garbage problem discussed was piles of trash in yards and whose responsibility it is to clean them up. In some instances people who had rented the house moved away and left the trash.

Connor said that if the property owner let the tenant move out without cleaning up the mess, it should be the owner's responsibility and not the city's to clean it up.

He also mentioned that this is the last week trash will be picked up if it is not in containers complying with city ordinances.

The containers must be plastic, galvanized iron or other substantial non-rusting construction and must be water tight with tight fitting lid covers.

Plastic yard bags in open barrels do not meet requirements, and trash in such containers will not be picked up.

The renaming of Fram Road to Harris Drive was approved Monday night upon the recommendation of alderman Jack Smarr.

Smarr said people living on the road were against naming it for a company's brand name.

The new name will go into effect July 1, 1976 to enable people on the road to use up their present stationery and to order new stationery with the new street name.

Ed Riley, a certified public accountant with Jone & Co. of Dexter, told the council an audit of the city would be completed within the next few weeks.

Conner reported that officer Bradley Daniel has resigned from the police department, effective today, and that his resignation had been accepted. No reason for the resignation was given.

Conner instructed him to come back when he had more information.

Consumer Price Index jumps in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher prices for food and gasoline pushed the nation's Consumer Price Index up eight-tenths of one per cent in June, double the May increase and the highest monthly jump in consumer prices since last September, the Labor Department reported today.

Food prices increased 1.5 per cent in June, the largest increase since last September when the increase was 1.6 per cent, and the price of food in grocery stores rose 1.9 per cent, the department said.

Over-all food price increases were less than the hike at the supermarket because the reported two-tenths of one per cent rise in restaurant meals held the total down slightly, a department spokesman explained.

Among increases, meat prices were reported up 5.8 per cent and prices of fruits and vegetables rose 2.4 per cent.

The price of gasoline was listed as up three per cent to an average of nearly 57 cents a gallon for regular and 60 cents a gallon for premium, compared to 55 cents for regular in May and 59 cents for premium. Gasoline prices have risen even further since information was gathered for the June price index.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said the real spendable earnings of workers declined an average four-tenths of one per cent in June compared with a 4.7 per cent increase in May. For the year, the Labor Department said real earnings of workers were down by four-tenths of a per cent.

The Consumer Price Index in June stood at 160.6 per cent of the 1967 average of 100. Ths meant it cost $160.60 to buy a statistical sample of goods that cost $100 in the base period. For the 12 month period ending in June, consumer prices rose 9.3 per cent, slightly below the inflation rates of last year.

The size of the June increase appeared to catch administration economists by surprise. They had expected some increase, especially in the food and fuel area, but there were no predictions that prices would increase as much as reported.

If the June increase were continued over an entire year, that would be an annual inflation rate of about 9.5 per cent. The May increase of four-tenths of one per cent, if continued for a year, would have led to a rate of about five per cent.

The figures in the Labor Department report were adjusted for seasonal variations. But even on an unadjusted basis, over-all consumer prices were up the same, eight-tenths of one per cent, officials said.

In the category of nonfood commodities, which includes such consumer goods as furniture, appliances, and fuels, prices rose five-tenths of one per cent, up from two-tenths of a per cent in May. Nearly half of this increase was due to the higher gasoline prices, the Labor Department said.

Prices of services rose seventh-tenths of one per cent in June, up from two-tenths of one per cent in May, largely because of an increase in home mortgage interest rates after six consecutive months of decline, the department reported.

There also were reported large increases for natural gas, electricity, telephone service, hospital charges and physician fees.

Used car prices rose sharply, up 3.7 per cent from May

There were decreases in most transportation costs and in prices of some foods, especially sugar, the Labor Department said.

The increase in consumer prices in June of eight-tenths of one per cent compared with an increase in June of last year of nine-tenths of one per cent.

The Ford administration maintains that its energy program will add about 2 per cent to the Consumer Price Index if and when the program is fully enforced. The recent increases in the price of gasoline of about 3 cents a gallon are expected to add at least two-tenths of 1 per cent to the index.

But government economists say there is little danger in the near future of any return to the double-digit inflation rates of 1974, when over-all consumer prices increased 12 per cent.

Although major aluminium producers have postponed the increases until after the current public hearings, President Cornell C. Maier of Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. said Monday that increased profits in the industry are necessary to prevent a future shortage of aluminum.

But council director Albert Rees said that while he did not challenge the industry's claim that costs have risen substantially since its last price increase, he is fearful the increases in the aluminum industry could set off a chain reaction of price increases in other industries that could impede the recovery from recession.

U.N. appeals to Sadat to keep peace force

By The Associated Press

United Nations diplomats were hopeful today that an appeal sent by the Security Council would prompt Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to agree to continuation of the U.N. Emergency Force in Sinai.

Some expressed belief that he would reply by nightfall, perhaps in a scheduled Cairo speech, and that the Council could go to work to renew the mandate of the buffer force, which expires Thursday.

Sadat also is expected to announce in the speech whether the U.S.-led efforts to agree on a second withdrawal from Sinai have succeeded.

The U.N. appeal, adopted 13 to 0 Monday night, was that Sadat "reconsider the attitude of Egypt" on extension of the mandate on grounds it would help create "an atmosphere conducive to progress toward agreement on a just and lasting peace."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy had notified the United Nations a week ago that Egypt did not consent to an extension because Israel was misusing the 3,919-man force to perpetuate the occupation of Arab lands and the state of "no war, no peace."

House leaders to discuss energy with President

WASHINGTON (AP) — House leaders arranged today to discuss energy legislation with President Ford Wednesday, but apparently it will not be until after the House kills his plan to phase out oil price controls over 30 months.

A vote on Ford's plan was expected later in the day.

On a related energy matter, it appeared no attempt would be made in the House to override Ford's veto of a bill Monday that would have provided more oil price controls.

Speaker Carl Albert, who told reporters of the White House meeting, said the vetoed bill probably would be sent to the House Commerce Committee, an indication the leadership doubts it can muster the two-thirds majority needed to override.

Ford's plan to phase out oil price controls could be killed by disapproval from either branch of Congress.

"Both the President and Congress are playing great defensive games," said Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex. "It's the third quarter and the score is zero-zero."

Wright, head of the House Democratic task force t devel-op a party policy on energy, said one of the major problems is that even if the House leadership could hammer out a compromise with the White House there is no assurance that the House members would vote for it.

Albert also acknowledged that Congress and administration energy representatives have not come up with a bill "that will fly."

Both Albert and Wright said the main snags include how high to set the price cap on domestic crude oil and how long it should take to phase out price controls.

One of the possibilities, said Wright, is to phase out price controls over a 36-month period and to place a $13.50 a barrel price ceiling on so-called new oil. There is also talk of a $2 a barrel tax on domestic crude oil.

Asked about possibilities that Ford could call Congress back into session to act on energy during its August vacation, Albert replied:

"If we have presidential spite on top of presidential veto, we will have no government around here at all."

Under the administration's plan, old oil — the 60 per cent of U.S. oil that now has a price ceiling of $5.25 a barrel — would gradually be allowed to rise in price until the end of the 30-month period. Then it would be free of controls and sold at world prices, which now are around $13 a barrel.

The Ford administration claims the President's plan would produce a 7-cent-a-gallon boost in gasoline prices by the end of 1977. However, some Democratic critics argue the hike would be 15 cents a gallon.

The U.S. oil that now has no price controls, so-called "new oil," would have come under an $11.25 ceiling in the bill that Ford vetoed Monday.

Ford said he vetoed the measure because it failed to encourage greater U.S. oil production and thus encouraged U.S. reliance on imported oil.

Meantime, Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb prompted speculation that a compromise was being worked out between the administration and Congress. Zarb said Monday that he met with some congressmen during the weekend and again on Monday to talk about differences on energy policy.

3 injured in SeMo accidents

A man and two young women were injured in two traffic accidents on Southeast Missouri roads Monday, the highway patrol reported today.

John Montgomery, 52, of Caruthersville received possible back and neck injuries in an automobile-train accident at 11:50 a.m. Monday.

The accident occurred when Montgomery failed to see the flashing lights at a railroad crossing and his car was struck by a Frisco train engineered by W. W. Rhodes of Chaffee.

The accident occurred four miles east of Wardell on Route A.

A three-car accident at 4:25 p.m. on Route M in Butler County four miles west of Highway 67 injured two young Poplar Bluff women.

The incident occurred when Anthony Ray Litpoldt, 18, of Burbank, Calif., attempted to stop after his eastbound car blew a radiator hose. As the Litpoldt car slowed down, it was struck from behind by a car driven east by Cherie Kay Lawson, 17, of Poplar Bluff which had just come over the top of a hill. The Lawson car then was struck in the side by a westbound car driven by Cozzie Ann Carrillo, 20, of Poplar Bluff.

The two young women received minor injuries and were taken to the Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Driver blinded, hits 2 girls

NEW MADRID — Two 11-year-old girls, Jennifer Jackson and Sarah Masterson, were injured when struck by a car about 9:30 p.m. Monday as they were walking in the 1200 block of Davis Street near the Masterson home, according to police.

The girls were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston, where the Jackson girl was treated for scratches and abrasions on her back and released. The Masterson girl remained in the hospital for observation of a lump on her head.

Police said the accident occurred when the driver of a westbound car, James Ford, 16, of New Madrid, was blinded by lights from an oncoming car and did not see the girls in time to avoid striking them. Ford applied his brakes and the car skidded about 20 feet before hitting the girls, police said.

Ford and a passenger, Billie Masterson, were not injured.

Waste collection service hits snag

DEXTER — The solid waste collection service which went into effect in Dexter early this month has run into problems, Mayor Willis Conner told the City Council Monday night.

The contract with Woods Sanitation requires either curb service or alley service, he said, but not both.

In some areas of the city citizens have been putting their trash along the street while others have placed theirs in the alley. Conner said that in some cases where more containers have been placed along the street than in the alley, the collection agency has skipped the alley and made the pickups on the street.

Conner instructed the aldermen to talk with the citizens in their wards. "Let's try to resolve these things," he said. "If a greater number of people require street pickup, then let's go to that. By next meeting, let's resolve it one way or another."

In residential areas where alley pickup is desired, service will still be provided.

Another garbage problem discussed was piles of trash in yards and whose responsibility it is to clean them up. In some instances people who had rented the house moved away and left the trash.

Connor said that if the property owner let the tenant move out without cleaning up the mess, it should be the owner's responsibility and not the city's to clean it up.

He also mentioned that this is the last week trash will be picked up if it is not in containers complying with city ordinances.

The containers must be plastic, galvanized iron or other substantial non-rusting construction and must be water tight with tight fitting lid covers.

Plastic yard bags in open barrels do not meet requirements, and trash in such containers will not be picked up.

The renaming of Fram Road to Harris Drive was approved Monday night upon the recommendation of alderman Jack Smarr.

Smarr said people living on the road were against naming it for a company's brand name.

The new name will go into effect July 1, 1976 to enable people on the road to use up their present stationery and to order new stationery with the new street name.

Ed Riley, a certified public accountant with Jone & Co. of Dexter, told the council an audit of the city would be completed within the next few weeks.

Conner reported that officer Bradley Daniel has resigned from the police department, effective today, and that his resignation had been accepted. No reason for the resignation was given.

Conner instructed him to come back when he had more information.

RESTRAINT COMES AFTERWARDS

Recently the House Subcommittee on International Security opened hearings on the formula for the second Strategic Arms Limitation agreement which President Ford and Chairman Brezhnev worked out at Vladivostok last November. The purpose of the hearings was to determine in advance the "will of the House" on the formula before the new agreement reaches the House sometime this fall.

Representative Jonathan Bingham (D-N.Y.), the first witness, raised an important issue in his testimony, namely, the destabilizing effect of new weapons on the balance of power SALT II will strike. The Congressman was especially concerned about Maneuverable Reentry Vehicles (MaRVs). They are an improved warhead for intercontinental ballistic missiles, which can "see" their target and make last-second course corrections.

Imagine a bullet able to skew right or left, up or down, when it sees that it is slightly off target. Result — bull's-eye every time. Now imagine a missile traveling over 5,000 miles and homing in on a target area with a diameter of less than 300 feet. Result — overwhelming advantage to the nation which decides to begin World War III.

Frightened by that prospect, Representative Bingham urged that we seek to convince the Soviet Union to ban MaRVs, even MaRV testing. Well and good. But, he went on to make the recommendation that in the meantime "We must exercise restraint." His rationale: The Soviets "have a sense of inferiority" and are therefore constantly trying to catch up.

One wonders what Soviet documents the Congressman has been reading. Everything from the Brezhnev desk says the Soviets are on top and America's days are numbered. Since Brezhnev signed SALT I, the Soviets have tested four new ICBMs, all bigger than our MINUTEMAN, and 70 of these new giants have already been installed in their underground silos.

Even if one grants charitably that braggarts are often covering up inferiority feelings and that at this moment U.S. missiles are slightly more accurate than Soviet missiles, we would like for Congressman Bingham to have supported his case with an example in which our restraint had been reciprocated by the Soviets — just one example.

In the absence of any, the U.S. policy must be: negotiate first, exercise restraint afterwards.

HIGH COURT APPLIES ANTI-TRUST LAWS TO LABOR UNION

In a landmark decision restraining antitrust violations of organized labor, the U.S. Supreme Couirt has ruled that a union's attempt to force a general contractor to agree to use only subcontractors employing that union's members is not protected by an exemption from the antitrust laws. The court issued the far-reaching decision in Connell Construction Co. v. Plumbers Local 100.

In the 5-to-4 decision written by Justice Powell and joined by Chief Justice Burger, Justices Blackmun, Rehnquist and White, the court for the first time held labor unions subject to the antitrust laws without the need of being joined by a management co-conspirator. The union position was supported in a dissent written by Justice Stewart and joined in by Justices Marshall, Brennan and Douglas.

Although the facts in the case involved a construction project, labor lawyers and antitrust experts interpreted the ruling as having a broad impact. Joseph Canterbury, jr., a Dallas attorney representing the Connell Co., said that the opinion was a victory not only for the company and the construction industry, but also for other industries everywhere.

Robert Thompson, an experienced management lawyer in the construction field, observed, "This is a welcome step toward equal application of the laws in this country which should indicate to organized labor they cannot abuse their license to act as employe representatives."

Pat Patterson, a business agent for the union, stated, "We poured a lot of money into this case and it looks like we came out on the short end."

The case arose when Local 100 sought an agreement from Connell that the company use only subcontractors having exclusive agreements with Local 100 on all Connell projects. The company at first refused to sign, but capitulated when union pickets shut down one of their projects. Connell then filed the antitrust suit against the union.

The lower court ruled, and the Court of Appeals agreed, that the agreement sought by the union was exempt from the federal antitrust laws under a National Labor Relations act provision. The Supreme Court disagreeed, noting that "Local 100 used direct restraints on the business market to support its organizing effort and that such agreement curtailed competition."

The court critically observed that the agreements sought from Connell and other general contractors "indiscriminately excluded non-union subcontractorts from a portion of the market even if the competitorts' advantages were ... derived from more efficient operating methods."

Richard Berman, director of Labor Law for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, noted that "This indictment of the constructyin trades unions is equally applicable to their current legislative efforts to obtain from a Congress they helped elect an increase in their already excessive power. They are seeking to change the law to enable them to totally shut down an entire construction site while trying to organize a non-union subcontractor who presumably received the bid because of his greater efficiency andlower cost."

The common situs picketing hearing on H.R. 5900 are presently bveing held in the union-dominated labor subcommittee of the HJouse Educationand Labor Committee. The unions are seeking to reverse the Denver Building Trades decision, a 1951 Supreme Court case, which recognized the protection afforded to neutral uninvolved employers in labor disputes.

Furthermore, the basis of the majority's decision was that unions enjoy an exemption from the antitrust laws only when they pursue matters that are traditionally the business of orhganized labor namely, seeking to organize or otherwixe acting in furtherance of their representation of employes in an existing collective bargaining relationship. In this case, the unions had specifically disclaimed interest in organizing Connell's employes. In fact, they engaged in what the court found "top down" organizing, pressuring contractorsto deal only with other businessmen who employ members of their union.

TRAVELS WITH HENRY PART III

BONN — Every American going abroad should travel with Henry Kissinger at least once. I had the pleasure a couple of weeks ago of flying around Europe with the secretary of state while he held useful and constructive talks in a friendly atmosphere with Giscard d'Estaing of France, Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union, Helmut Schmidt of Germany and Yitzhak Rabin of Israel.

There is no greater honer than to be selected as one of the elite 14 journalists to fly on Mr. Kissinger's well-appointed Air Force 707 andshare in the joys and heartbreak of American jet diplomacy.

The advantages of traveling with Mr. Kissinger are enormous. You don't have to go through customs, you don't have to carry your own luggage and you don't have to tip taxi drivers.

The only disadvantage is that you have to stand in hotel lobbies and in front of old castles for five or six hours doing nothing until he is ready to leave for his next stop.

The one thing every journalist must agree on when traveling with Mr. Kissinger is that you may not identify the person who gives background briefings on the plane by name. You can't even say a high U.S. official with wavy hair, horn-rimmed glasses and German accent who had his garbage stolen last week said --.

The only attribution permitted is "a senior American official on Dr. Kissinger's plane," and since I took the pledge I don't want anyone guessing who that could be.

What I didn't realize until I traveled on the Kissinger plane is how involved you can become in the secretary's foreign policies. Because you are with him, the foreign press waiting on the ground assume you know something they don't, and pretty soon you find yourself holding press conferences and giveing interviews on the steps of chateaus and castles in Paris, Geneva and Bonn. When you're new on the plane you tend to deny inside knowledge concerning Kissinger, but in a short while you become convinced you are an expert and answer every question posed to you by desperate news-hungry press.

While I was willing to talk frankly with the foreign journalists I insisted anything I said had to be attributed to a senior American correspondent traveling with a senior American official.

This is how these conferences would go?

Senior correspondent: We felt since these were exploratory talks it would be too early for her to make an appearance.

German newsperson: Did Nancy come to the airport and if so what was her mood?

S.C.: She seemed relaxed and smiling and both she and Henry agreed that they had frank dialogues and fruitful exchanges during their dinner of the previous evening.

French correspondent: Why did Dr. Kissinger come to Europe at this time?

S.C.: It is very hot in Washington now and he hadn't been out of the country in two weeks.

Israeli TV man: If Dr. Kissinger fails in these talks what will he do next?

S.C.: Kissinger never fails. Sometimes he may not reach a full agreement andthen he is willing to settle for a narrowing of the differences between the parties which may eventually bring progress in areas at some future unspecified date within the framework of previous talks and frank exchanges. But that's off the record.

Japanese newsman: Why did Dr. Kissinger smile when he came out of his meeting with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko?

S.C.: If you had just spent six hours with Gromyko wouldn't you be smiling?

Belgian newsman: Willthere be a disarmament agreement this year?

S.C.: We're optimistic that a formula can be worked out that will satisfy all parties. I can't give you details now of our compromise plan because Dr. Kissinger and I still have to report back to President Ford.

British Newsperson: Does Dr. Kissinger ever get seriously depressed when he is on a trip like this?

S.C.: Only when he laughs.

THE NUCLEAR THREAT REVISITED

It is ironic that the Rosenberg case is being resurrected as a public issue at precisely the time that the nuclear threat is causing more world anxiety than it has in a decade or so.

The issue in the trial of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg was, of course, whether they had delivered the 'secret" of the atomic bomb to the Soviet Union.

The problem today is that there is no "secret" to nuclear capability. It is there for the development, or purchase, by those nations which have the necessary industrial, intellectual and or-financial resources.

Considering all those doomsday warnings of unrestricted proliferation back in the '50s, it is amazing how long the nuclear monopoly of a small group of more or less cooperative governments has been maintained.

Signs have been multiplying, however, that the dam may be about to break. And the pressure is not, as once feared, coming from power politics. It's economic.

As practicality of nuclear power has increased in recent years, helped along lately by the political manipulation of world oil supplies, the export of nuclear technology has become an increasingly profitable business for those nations who got into the game early.

The trouble is that nuclear power technology can't really be separated from nuclear weapons capabiality, as demonstrated last year when India, with Canada's unwitting aid, became the sixth nation to explode a nuclear device.

If others choose to follow the Indian lead, the mushroom cloud could appear next in any of a number of countries busily importing nuclear know-how. A Brazilian-West German deal involving reactors and fuel processing facilities has drawn press attention and open U.S. disapproval. France is working on deals with Argentina, Pakistan and South Korea. The Soviets are selling Libya a reactor. Canada, once burned on its reactor delivery to Indian, is nonetheless out there hustling up new business with Taiwan and, again, Argentina, Pakistan and South Korea.

Control—internationally supervised safeguards to assure that nations acquiring nuclear facilities for peaceful purposes do not divert same to weapons manufacture—was supposed to be the answer back in 1968 when the treaty against proliferation was concluded. But a number of present and potential nuclear powers —notably France, China, India and Brazil—have never signed up. And the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency, charged with overseeing safeguards, has all of 67 inspectors to keep tabs on a world.

The United States, whose viewpoint is that more is definitely not merrier, has reverted to semi-secret diplomacy with those few countrries at the top of the nuclear heap in hopes of strengthening policing or burgeoning nuclear commerce. Thus a hush-hush June meeting in London of, pricnipally, U.S. British, Soviet, French, West German and Canadian representatives.

Nothing has been revealed as to discussiohs or decisions, if any, but it was at least encouraging that formerly holdout France participated.

Meanwhile, back in Washington President Ford has been giving a striking demonstration of left hand, right hand noncommunication. With the United States committed to more stringent controls internationally, he is proposing to shift domestic responsibility for production and sales of the basic nuclear material, enriched uranium, from the government to private industry.

The reason is—you guessed it—economics. He would perfer that private capital rather than government funds underwrite the considerable expansion of production facilities necessary to keep up with the anticipated rise in U.S. export sales, from last year's $21 million to $5 billion during the next five years.

How ironic can a threat to existence get?

NOW THE GOOD NEWS, TRAFFIC DEATHS DROP

Thousands of Americans who should have been traffic statistics in 1974 are alive in '75, thanks to a variety of factors.

According to a preliminary study by the National Safety Council, 17,060 traffic fatalities occurred between May 1 and August 31 last year, the peak driving months, compared with 20,630 for the same period in 1973.

More than half the savings of lives, says the Council, can be attributed to reduced vehicle speeds, or about 10 percentage points out of a total 17 percent reduction.

Even though a majority of drivers in a five-state sample taken during the study period weren't complying with the 55-mile-per-hour limit in rural areas, they did slow down from their 1973 speeds — from 70.2 mph to 62 mph. More drivers also were traveling at about the same pace on the highway, which produced a smoother traffic flow and lessened the probability of accidents.

Less travel and less night driving, fewer occupants per vehicle and greater use of safety belts each contributed two percentage points. "Unknown factors" added another two points, which would have made a total of 18.

Unfortunately, a traffic fatality increase of one percentage point had to be subtracted from the total, caused by increased use of motorcycles and small cars and increased mileage by younger drivers.

OTHER PAPERS ARE SAYING

BEARS WATCHING

Emporians who have scars from the Urban Renewal wars here a decade ago should be wary of a new plan called "increment financing" that is now before the Legislature.

The purpose of the bill, which sounds innocent enough, is "to stimulate redevelopment of downtown urban areas, assist in the location of new businesses in the state, assist the expansion of existing businesses, provide greater employment opportunities, and thus promote the general welfare of the citizens of the state."

Each city in Kansas would be given the power to issue revenue bonds to buy existing buildings or construction sites. Money from bonds also could be used to clear blighted areas and erect new business buildings. (As with earlier industrial revenue bonds the increment financing would not be a general obligation of the city. That is, if something went wrong, taxpayers would not be forced to pay off the debt. Investors who purchased the bonds would not have to pay state income taxes on the money they received from interest.)

Here are further steps in the increment financing process:

1. The city would sign a lease-purchase agreement with a developer to clear the site acquired with bond money and toerect, repair, and equip buildings.

2. After the date set for completion, the developer would begin making annual payments to the city equal to the amount of taxes the property would bring in if it were put on the tax rolls.

3. The developer also might be asked to pay a sum equal to the taxes on the buildings that were in the redevelopment project area before it was cleared. If his optional feature were included, income would be split among city, county, school district, etc.

4. After the city was reimbursed for expenses, including payment of revenue bonds and interest, the title to the project would be turned over to the developer.

There are two clinkers in the plan.: .1. While the property is owned by the city it would be exempt from taxation; 2. Upon unanimous agreement by the governing body, any property in town could be condemned.

Obviously, the Tax Increment Bill would put a tremendous amount of power into the hands of the city. Voters would do well to bear this in mind when they go to the polls April 1st to elect new commissioners. – The Emporia Gazette.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Coast Guard Aircraft Deal: Smooth Sailing for Rockwell

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The Coast Guard, whose motto "Semper Paratus" means "Always Ready," seems ready to throw a $500 million aircraft deal to Rockwell International and to mislead Congress about it.

The intricate scheme is revealed in voluminous Coast Guard, industry and congressional documents in our hands. Based on his own investigation, Rep. John Murphy, D.-N.Y., as a former House Coast Guard subcommittee chairman, is determined to torpedo the bonanza.

At issue are 41 new medium-range planes which the Coast Guard is buying to replace its present fleet of coast-watchers. Total costs, including parts, will easily run to a half-billion dollars over the lifetimes of the planes.

When the decision was made in 1971 to outfit the Coast Guard with the patrol planes, there was every appearance that all potential manufacturers would get a crack at the handsome contract.

This would have assured the best break for the taxpayer. But by August 1973, the memos show, the Coast Guard's plan for competitive bidding unaccountably had been put aside.

In its place, the memos indicate a noncompetitive contract was to be awarded and the "specs" show that only one U.S. bidder would qualify. The firm was Rockwell International.

Competing aircraft makers roared. Grumman wrote Rep. Murphy that the Coast Guard was "leading on ... Grumman, Falcon Jet, Gates, Lear Jet (and) Cessna under the pretense of an impending open competition." In fact, said Grumman, the Department of Transportation, which oversees the Coast Guard's chief procurement officer, with shocking candor, told a meeting of planemakers and others that "I have already made up my mind."

Shortly before the Coast Guard could hand the $500 million contract to Rockwell, Murphy got his Irish up and told the Coast Guard he would blow the whistle unless they guaranteed free competition. A few hours before he was to testify, however, the Coast Guard capitulated. Commandant Adm. Chester Bender agreed to open the field to all planemakers.

But despite the agreement the documents strongly indicate that the Coast Guard rigged the contract a second time. The new "specs" also lean to such special Rockwell features as electric foot-warmers, seats with custom corners and deflatable entrance seals.

The new Coast Guard commandant, Adm. Owen Siler, vigorously defended the fairness of the procurement and denied any outside pressure. "There was no other American airplane that would come close," he explained. Nevertheless, he is still exploring other possibilities.

Footnote: This is not Rockwell's first gusher from the government. In an earlier column, we told how it unloaded an out-of-the-way $20 million building on the government in exchange for far more desirable federal holdings.

AGAINST THE GRAIN: Two Midwestern grain companies have monopolized some $275 million worth of blended grain sales to the Agriculture Department which has supinely helped perpetuate the costly monopoly.

A General Accounting Office report roasts the Agriculture Department for caving in to the two companies. The report fails to identify them, but we have learned they are Krause Milling Co., Milwaukee, and Lauhoff Grain Co., Danville, Ill.

Between them they control 95 per cent of sales to Agriculture of a high-protein blend of corn, soybeans and milk donated to hungry nations. The reason for his lopsided market, our probe shows, is that Agriculture's specifications are tailored to the two firms' products.

James Schlick, deputy head of the blended food program at Agriculture, stoutly defended his policies toward Lauhoff and Krause. Schlick then reluctantly conceded he once worked for Krause. The two firms deny any connivance.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Rep. Bella Abzug, D.-N.Y., plans hearings this fall in her House Information subcommittee on overclassification of federal documents. In her safe, she already has secret documents she hopes to use if she can get them unclassified. They include old plans for use of nuclear tactical weapons against Red China in case of a threat to Nationalist China's offshore 'islands .... The Department of Interior has awarded a marine archeology contract to a museum even though a bid backed by famed marine expert Jacques Cousteau was $70,000 lower. Interior claims the $194,000 contract went to the museum instead of Cousteau for "technical reasons" ... The National Indian Youth Council is fighting a coal gasification plan on the Navajo reservation claiming it will spew out deadly lead and mercury. The $4 billion project will convert coal into much-needed natural gas, but the Indians say it will siphon up their water without bringing any longterm benefits to the Navajos.

Law-and-order is a code word for racism, right? Well, American University took a scientific sampling of 1,000 persons in the District of Columbia and found that black residents advocate sterner action against criminals than do whites. When close to 1,000 persons were asked, "Do you think stiffer sentences for criminals would cut down crime?" 74 per cent of District blacks responded yes, compared to just 61 per cent of D.C. whites. Asked, "Do you think tougher policies on parole would cut down crime?" 82 per cent of D.C. blacks said yes, compared to 62 per cent of whites. Fifty-six per cent of D.C. blacks said that the death penalty would reduce crime, while the same sentiment was held by just 54 per cent whites polled.

HIGH COURT APPLIES ANTI-TRUST LAWS TO LABOR UNION

In a landmark decision restraining antitrust violations of organized labor, the U.S. Supreme Couirt has ruled that a union's attempt to force a general contractor to agree to use only subcontractors employing that union's members is not protected by an exemption from the antitrust laws. The court issued the far-reaching decision in Connell Construction Co. v. Plumbers Local 100.

In the 5-to-4 decision written by Justice Powell and joined by Chief Justice Burger, Justices Blackmun, Rehnquist and White, the court for the first time held labor unions subject to the antitrust laws without the need of being joined by a management co-conspirator. The union position was supported in a dissent written by Justice Stewart and joined in by Justices Marshall, Brennan and Douglas.

Although the facts in the case involved a construction project, labor lawyers and antitrust experts interpreted the ruling as having a broad impact. Joseph Canterbury, jr., a Dallas attorney representing the Connell Co., said that the opinion was a victory not only for the company and the construction industry, but also for other industries everywhere.

Robert Thompson, an experienced management lawyer in the construction field, observed, "This is a welcome step toward equal application of the laws in this country which should indicate to organized labor they cannot abuse their license to act as employe representatives."

Pat Patterson, a business agent for the union, stated, "We poured a lot of money into this case and it looks like we came out on the short end."

The case arose when Local 100 sought an agreement from Connell that the company use only subcontractors having exclusive agreements with Local 100 on all Connell projects. The company at first refused to sign, but capitulated when union pickets shut down one of their projects. Connell then filed the antitrust suit against the union.

The lower court ruled, and the Court of Appeals agreed, that the agreement sought by the union was exempt from the federal antitrust laws under a National Labor Relations act provision. The Supreme Court disagreeed, noting that "Local 100 used direct restraints on the business market to support its organizing effort and that such agreement curtailed competition."

The court critically observed that the agreements sought from Connell and other general contractors "indiscriminately excluded non-union subcontractorts from a portion of the market even if the competitorts' advantages were ... derived from more efficient operating methods."

Richard Berman, director of Labor Law for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, noted that "This indictment of the constructyin trades unions is equally applicable to their current legislative efforts to obtain from a Congress they helped elect an increase in their already excessive power. They are seeking to change the law to enable them to totally shut down an entire construction site while trying to organize a non-union subcontractor who presumably received the bid because of his greater efficiency andlower cost."

The common situs picketing hearing on H.R. 5900 are presently bveing held in the union-dominated labor subcommittee of the HJouse Educationand Labor Committee. The unions are seeking to reverse the Denver Building Trades decision, a 1951 Supreme Court case, which recognized the protection afforded to neutral uninvolved employers in labor disputes.

Furthermore, the basis of the majority's decision was that unions enjoy an exemption from the antitrust laws only when they pursue matters that are traditionally the business of orhganized labor namely, seeking to organize or otherwixe acting in furtherance of their representation of employes in an existing collective bargaining relationship. In this case, the unions had specifically disclaimed interest in organizing Connell's employes. In fact, they engaged in what the court found "top down" organizing, pressuring contractorsto deal only with other businessmen who employ members of their union.

TRAVELS WITH HENRY PART III

BONN — Every American going abroad should travel with Henry Kissinger at least once. I had the pleasure a couple of weeks ago of flying around Europe with the secretary of state while he held useful and constructive talks in a friendly atmosphere with Giscard d'Estaing of France, Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union, Helmut Schmidt of Germany and Yitzhak Rabin of Israel.

There is no greater honer than to be selected as one of the elite 14 journalists to fly on Mr. Kissinger's well-appointed Air Force 707 andshare in the joys and heartbreak of American jet diplomacy.

The advantages of traveling with Mr. Kissinger are enormous. You don't have to go through customs, you don't have to carry your own luggage and you don't have to tip taxi drivers.

The only disadvantage is that you have to stand in hotel lobbies and in front of old castles for five or six hours doing nothing until he is ready to leave for his next stop.

The one thing every journalist must agree on when traveling with Mr. Kissinger is that you may not identify the person who gives background briefings on the plane by name. You can't even say a high U.S. official with wavy hair, horn-rimmed glasses and German accent who had his garbage stolen last week said---.

The only attribution permitted is "a senior American official on Dr. Kissinger's plane," and since I took the pledge I don't want anyone guessing who that could be.

What I didn't realize until I traveled on the Kissinger plane is how involved you can become in the secretary's foreign policies. Because you are with him, the foreign press waiting on the ground assume you know something they don't, and pretty soon you find yourself holding press conferences and giveing interviews on the steps of chateaus and castles in Paris, Geneva and Bonn. When you're new on the plane you tend to deny inside knowledge concerning Kissinger, but in a short while you become convinced you are an expert and answer every question posed to you by desperate news-hungry press.

While I was willing to talk frankly with the foreign journalists I insisted anything I said had to be attributed to a senior American correspondent traveling with a senior American official.

This is how these conferences would go?

Senior correspondent: We felt since these were exploratory talks it would be too early for her to make an appearance.

German newsperson: Did Nancy come to the airport and if so what was her mood?

S.C.: She seemed relaxed and smiling and both she and Henry agreed that they had frank dialogues and fruitful exchanges during their dinner of the previous evening.

French correspondent: Why did Dr. Kissinger come to Europe at this time?

S.C.: It is very hot in Washington now and he hadn't been out of the country in two weeks.

Israeli TV man: If Dr. Kissinger fails in these talks what will he do next?

S.C.: Kissinger never fails. Sometimes he may not reach a full agreement andthen he is willing to settle for a narrowing of the differences between the parties which may eventually bring progress in areas at some future unspecified date within the framework of previous talks and frank exchanges. But that's off the record.

Japanese newsman: Why did Dr. Kissinger smile when he came out of his meeting with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko?

S.C.: If you had just spent six hours with Gromyko wouldn't you be smiling?

Belgian newsman: Willthere be a disarmament agreement this year?

S.C.: We're optimistic that a formula can be worked out that will satisfy all parties. I can't give you details now of our compromise plan because Dr. Kissinger and I still have to report back to President Ford.

British Newsperson: Does Dr. Kissinger ever get seriously depressed when he is on a trip like this?

S.C.: Only when he laughs.

THE NUCLEAR THREAT REVISITED

It is ironic that the Rosenberg case is being resurrected as a public issue at precisely the time that the nuclear threat is causing more world anxiety than it has in a decade or so.

The issue in the trial of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg was, of course, whether they had delivered the 'secret" of the atomic bomb to the Soviet Union.

The problem today is that there is no "secret" to nuclear capability. It is there for the development, or purchase, by those nations which have the necessary industrial, intellectual and or-financial resources.

Considering all those doomsday warnings of unrestricted proliferation back in the '50s, it is amazing how long the nuclear monopoly of a small group of more or less cooperative governments has been maintained.

Signs have been multiplying, however, that the dam may be about to break. And the pressure is not, as once feared, coming from power politics. It's economic.

As practicality of nuclear power has increased in recent years, helped along lately by the political manipulation of world oil supplies, the export of nuclear technology has become an increasingly profitable business for those nations who got into the game early.

The trouble is that nuclear power technology can't really be separated from nuclear weapons capabiality, as demonstrated last year when India, with Canada's unwitting aid, became the sixth nation to explode a nuclear device.

If others choose to follow the Indian lead, the mushroom cloud could appear next in any of a number of countries busily importing nuclear know-how. A Brazilian-West German deal involving reactors and fuel processing facilities has drawn press attention and open U.S. disapproval. France is working on deals with Argentina, Pakistan and South Korea. The Soviets are selling Libya a reactor. Canada, once burned on its reactor delivery to Indian, is nonetheless out there hustling up new business with Taiwan and, again, Argentina, Pakistan and South Korea.

Control—internationally supervised safeguards to assure that nations acquiring nuclear facilities for peaceful purposes do not divert same to weapons manufacture—was supposed to be the answer back in 1968 when the treaty against proliferation was concluded. But a number of present and potential nuclear powers —notably France, China, India and Brazil—have never signed up. And the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency, charged with overseeing safeguards, has all of 67 inspectors to keep tabs on a world.

The United States, whose viewpoint is that more is definitely not merrier, has reverted to semi-secret diplomacy with those few countrries at the top of the nuclear heap in hopes of strengthening policing or burgeoning nuclear commerce. Thus a hush-hush June meeting in London of, pricnipally, U.S. British, Soviet, French, West German and Canadian representatives.

Nothing has been revealed as to discussiohs or decisions, if any, but it was at least encouraging that formerly holdout France participated.

Meanwhile, back in Washington President Ford has been giving a striking demonstration of left hand, right hand noncommunication. With the United States committed to more stringent controls internationally, he is proposing to shift domestic responsibility for production and sales of the basic nuclear material, enriched uranium, from the government to private industry.

The reason is—you guessed it—economics. He would perfer that private capital rather than government funds underwrite the considerable expansion of production facilities necessary to keep up with the anticipated rise in U.S. export sales, from last year's $21 million to $5 billion during the next five years.

How ironic can a threat to existence get?

NOW THE GOOD NEWS, TRAFFIC DEATHS DROP

Thousands of Americans who should have been traffic statistics in 1974 are alive in '75, thanks to a variety of factors.

According to a preliminary study by the National Safety Council, 17,060 traffic fatalities occurred between May 1 and August 31 last year, the peak driving months, compared with 20,630 for the same period in 1973.

More than half the savings of lives, says the Council, can be attributed to reduced vehicle speeds, or about 10 percentage points out of a total 17 percent reduction.

Even though a majority of drivers in a five-state sample taken during the study period weren't complying with the 55-mile-per-hour limit in rural areas, they did slow down from their 1973 speeds — from 70.2 mph to 62 mph. More drivers also were traveling at about the same pace on the highway, which produced a smoother traffic flow and lessened the probability of accidents.

Less travel and less night driving, fewer occupants per vehicle and greater use of safety belts each contributed two percentage points. "Unknown factors" added another two points, which would have made a total of 18.

Unfortunately, a traffic fatality increase of one percentage point had to be subtracted from the total, caused by increased use of motorcycles and small cars and increased mileage by younger drivers.

OTHER PAPERS ARE SAYING

BEARS WATCHING

Emporians who have scars from the Urban Renewal wars here a decade ago should be wary of a new plan called "increment financing" that is now before the Legislature.

The purpose of the bill, which sounds innocent enough, is "to stimulate redevelopment of downtown urban areas, assist in the location of new businesses in the state, assist the expansion of existing businesses, provide greater employment opportunities, and thus promote the general welfare of the citizens of the state."

Each city in Kansas would be given the power to issue revenue bonds to buy existing buildings or construction sites. Money from bonds also could be used to clear blighted areas and erect new business buildings. (As with earlier industrial revenue bonds the increment financing would not be a general obligation of the city. That is, if something went wrong, taxpayers would not be forced to pay off the debt. Investors who purchased the bonds would not have to pay state income taxes on the money they received from interest.)

Here are further steps in the increment financing process:

1. The city would sign a lease-purchase agreement with a developer to clear the site acquired with bond money and toerect, repair, and equip buildings.

2. After the date set for completion, the developer would begin making annual payments to the city equal to the amount of taxes the property would bring in if it were put on the tax rolls.

3. The developer also might be asked to pay a sum equal to the taxes on the buildings that were in the redevelopment project area before it was cleared. If his optional feature were included, income would be split among city, county, school district, etc.

4. After the city was reimbursed for expenses, including payment of revenue bonds and interest, the title to the project would be turned over to the developer.

There are two clinkers in the plan.: .1. While the property is owned by the city it would be exempt from taxation; 2. Upon unanimous agreement by the governing body, any property in town could be condemned.

Obviously, the Tax Increment Bill would put a tremendous amount of power into the hands of the city. Voters would do well to bear this in mind when they go to the polls April 1st to elect new commissioners. – The Emporia Gazette.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Coast Guard Aircraft Deal: Smooth Sailing for Rockwell

with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The Coast Guard, whose motto "Semper Paratus" means "Always Ready," seems ready to throw a $500 million aircraft deal to Rockwell International and to mislead Congress about it.

The intricate scheme is revealed in voluminous Coast Guard, industry and congressional documents in our hands. Based on his own investigation, Rep. John Murphy, D.-N.Y., as a former House Coast Guard subcommittee chairman, is determined to torpedo the bonanza.

At issue are 41 new medium-range planes which the Coast Guard is buying to replace its present fleet of coast-watchers. Total costs, including parts, will easily run to a half-billion dollars over the lifetimes of the planes.

When the decision was made in 1971 to outfit the Coast Guard with the patrol planes, there was every appearance that all potential manufacturers would get a crack at the handsome contract.

This would have assured the best break for the taxpayer. But by August 1973, the memos show, the Coast Guard's plan for competitive bidding unaccountably had been put aside.

In its place, the memos indicate a noncompetitive contract was to be awarded and the "specs" show that only one U.S. bidder would qualify. The firm was Rockwell International.

Competing aircraft makers roared. Grumman wrote Rep. Murphy that the Coast Guard was "leading on ... Grumman, Falcon Jet, Gates, Lear Jet (and) Cessna under the pretense of an impending open competition." In fact, said Grumman, the Department of Transportation, which oversees the Coast Guard's chief procurement officer, with shocking candor, told a meeting of planemakers and others that "I have already made up my mind."

Shortly before the Coast Guard could hand the $500 million contract to Rockwell, Murphy got his Irish up and told the Coast Guard he would blow the whistle unless they guaranteed free competition. A few hours before he was to testify, however, the Coast Guard capitulated. Commandant Adm. Chester Bender agreed to open the field to all planemakers.

But despite the agreement the documents strongly indicate that the Coast Guard rigged the contract a second time. The new "specs" also lean to such special Rockwell features as electric foot-warmers, seats with custom corners and deflatable entrance seals.

The new Coast Guard commandant, Adm. Owen Siler, vigorously defended the fairness of the procurement and denied any outside pressure."There was no other American airplane that would come close," he explained. Nevertheless, he is still exploring other possibilities.

Footnote: This is not Rockwell's first gusher from the government. In an earlier column, we told how it unloaded an out-of-the-way $20 million building on the government in exchange for far more desirable federal holdings.

AGAINST THE GRAIN: Two Midwestern grain companies have monopolized some $275 million worth of blended grain sales to the Agriculture Department which has supinely helped perpetuate the costly monopoly.

A General Accounting Office report roasts the Agriculture Department which has supinely helped perpetuate the costly monopoly.

A General Accounting Office report roasts the Agriculture Department for caving in to the two companies. The report fails to identify them, but we have learned they are Krause Milling Co., Milwaukee, and Lauhoff Grain Co., Danville, Ill.

Between them they control 95 per cent of sales to Agriculture of a high-protein blend of corn, soybeans and milk donated to hungry nations. The reason for his lopsided market, our probe shows, is that Agriculture's specifications are tailored to the two firms' products.

James Schlick, deputy head of the blended food program at Agriculture, stoutly defended his policies toward Lauhoff and Krause. Schlick then reluctantly conceded he once worked for Krause. The two firms deny any connivance.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Rep. Bella Abzug, D.-N.Y., plans hearings this fall in her House Information subcommittee on overclassification of federal documents. In her safe, she already has secret documents she hopes to use if she can get them unclassified. They include old plans for use of nuclear tactical weapons against Red China in case of a threat to Nationalist China's offshore 'islands .... The Department of Interior has awarded a marine archeology contract to a museum even though a bid backed by famed marine expert Jacques Cousteau was $70,000 lower. Interior claims the $194,000 contract went to the museum instead of Cousteau for "technical reasons" ... The National Indian Youth Council is fighting a coal gasification plan on the Navajo reservation, claiming it will spew out deadly lead and mercury. The $4 billion project will convert coal into much-needed natural gas, but the Indians say it will siphon up their water without bringing any longterm benefits to the Navajos.

CIRCUIT COURT

BENTON—Wetterau, Inc., owner of a grocery distributor warehouse in Scott City, filed suit Friday in Circuit Court against Bonnie Chem-Spec Corp. and McGee Chemical Co. Wetterau is seeking $131,208.34 in damages.

On Sept. 6, 1974, Wetterau, Inc., bought twelve 55-gallon containers of Duo-Treet for concrete floors from Bonnie Chem-Spec Corp. at Maryland Heights. The product is manufactured by McGee Chemical Co. of Des Plaines, Ill.

At the time of purchase, Wetterau was assured that Duo-Treet was safe and would not harm the food stored in the warehouse where the chemical would be used.

The odor of Duo-Treet did not dissipate and the frozen food stored in the warehouse was contaminated.

The grocery firm charged that $18,534.42 was lost in frozen food and another $5,566 was lost to handling of returned contaminated foods. The frozen products had been shipped to 50 retail food market outlets in Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas before the contamination was discovered.

The cost of the Duo-Treet, $7,187.92, was also listed as a loss.

In addition to the material losses, Wetterau is seeking $100,000 for a loss in customer confidence and goodwill.

The Wetterau firm also asks for interest on the full amount at the rate of eight per cent per annum since Jan. 30.

Equal time question is raised

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News chief Richard S. Salant says CBS live coverage of President Ford's future news conferences is in doubt for the time being. The reason: An "equal time" question.

It was raised by CBS after Ford's early announcement this month that he'll seek another term in 1976. It involves the Federal Communications Commission's "equal time" law on broadcast coverage of political candidates.

According to the FCC, CBS last week asked the agency to reverse a 1964 ruling and exempt live coverage of presidential news conferences from the equal time law.

CBS contends that any legally-qualified Republican candidate opposing Ford for the presidency might now be able to demand equal time on the air within seven days of live broadcasts of a Ford news conference.

There aren't any such candidates now, but CBS notes that several have been mentioned as getting ready to enter the GOP ring, among them former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Milt Gross, an FCC specialist on political broadcast laws, says legally-qualified Democratic presidential candidates currently can't demand equal time because they're considered competing only among themselves now.

"Between now and the primary elections and the (Democratic) party convention next year, only the Republicans would have the right to ask for equal time against President Ford," he said.

The issue has lain dormant since 1964. That year, after a CBS query, the FCC ruled 34 days before the November elections that live coverage of presidential news conferences (President Johnson was seeking re-election then) wasn't exempt from equal time demands.

Goss said the issue didn't come up in 1968 because Johnson wasn't seeking re-election. Nor, he said, did it come up in June 1972, when President Nixon, having become a declared candidate six months earlier, held his first televised news conference in more than a year.

He said now that CBS has petitioned the FCC on the matter, "the commission will review our 1964 decision and see if we should change it or not." He said he didn't know when a ruling would come.

Salant said the equal time question is acute because Ford has promised to hold an average of one news conference a month. He was asked if CBS will stop its live coverage until an FCC decision.

"I can't answer that," he said. "I don't want to decide that until it stares me in the face." He later was asked if CBS' live coverage of Ford's news conferences is in doubt until an FCC ruling.

"Yes, that certainly is true," he said. "We certainly have not made the decision—until this is cleared up—that we'll go ahead anyhow."

Busing misfired

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Vanderbilt University sociology professor who codirected a 1966 survey that prompted government support for the use of busing as a means of school integration now says busing has "misfired." "The goals sought by large scale busing are highly desirable, but the negative consequences of busing are larger than we thought," said Ernest Q. Campbell, dean of Vanderbilt's graduate school.

CIRCUIT COURT

BENTON—Wetterau, Inc., owner of a grocery distributor warehouse in Scott City, filed suit Friday in Circuit Court against Bonnie Chem-Spec Corp. and McGee Chemical Co. Wetterau is seeking $131,208.34 in damages.

On Sept. 6, 1974, Wetterau, Inc., bought twelve 55-gallon containers of Duo-Treet for concrete floors from Bonnie Chem-Spec Corp. at Maryland Heights. The product is manufactured by McGee Chemical Co. of Des Plaines, Ill.

At the time of purchase, Wetterau was assured that Duo-Treet was safe and would not harm the food stored in the warehouse where the chemical would be used.

The odor of Duo-Treet did not dissipate and the frozen food stored in the warehouse was contaminated.

The grocery firm charged that $18,534.42 was lost in frozen food and another $5,566 was lost to handling of returned contaminated foods. The frozen products had been shipped to 50 retail food market outlets in Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas before the contamination was discovered.

The cost of the Duo-Treet, $7,187.92, was also listed as a loss.

In addition to the material losses, Wetterau is seeking $100,000 for a loss in customer confidence and goodwill.

The Wetterau firm also asks for interest on the full amount at the rate of eight per cent per annum since Jan. 30.

Equal time question is raised

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News chief Richard S. Salant says CBS live coverage of President Ford's future news conferences is in doubt for the time being. The reason: An "equal time" question.

It was raised by CBS after Ford's early announcement this month that he'll seek another term in 1976. It involves the Federal Communications Commission's "equal time" law on broadcast coverage of political candidates.

According to the FCC, CBS last week asked the agency to reverse a 1964 ruling and exempt live coverage of presidential news conferences from the equal time law.

CBS contends that any legally-qualified Republican candidate opposing Ford for the presidency might now be able to demand equal time on the air within seven days of live broadcasts of a Ford news conference.

There aren't any such candidates now, but CBS notes that several have been mentioned as getting ready to enter the GOP ring, among them former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Milt Gross, an FCC specialist on political broadcast laws, says legally-qualified Democratic presidential candidates currently can't demand equal time because they're considered competing only among themselves now.

"Between now and the primary elections and the (Democratic) party convention next year, only the Republicans would have the right to ask for equal time against President Ford," he said.

The issue has lain dormant since 1964. That year, after a CBS query, the FCC ruled 34 days before the November elections that live coverage of presidential news conferences (President Johnson was seeking re-election then) wasn't exempt from equal time demands.

Goss said the issue didn't come up in 1968 because Johnson wasn't seeking re-election. Nor, he said, did it come up in June 1972, when President Nixon, having become a declared candidate six months earlier, held his first televised news conference in more than a year.

He said now that CBS has petitioned the FCC on the matter, "the commission will review our 1964 decision and see if we should change it or not." He said he didn't know when a ruling would come.

Salant said the equal time question is acute because Ford has promised to hold an average of one news conference a month. He was asked if CBS will stop its live coverage until an FCC decision.

"I can't answer that," he said. "I don't want to decide that until it stares me in the face." He later was asked if CBS' live coverage of Ford's news conferences is in doubt until an FCC ruling.

"Yes, that certainly is true," he said. "We certainly have not made the decision—until this is cleared up—that we'll go ahead anyhow."

Busing misfired

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Vanderbilt University sociology professor who codirected a 1966 survey that prompted government support for the use of busing as a means of school integration now says busing has "misfired." "The goals sought by large scale busing are highly desirable, but the negative consequences of busing are larger than we thought," said Ernest Q. Campbell, dean of Vanderbilt's graduate school.

Cellulite

Learn how to relax

By NICOLE RONSARD

This is the last of a six-part series.

Learning how to relax is very important in cellulite control. Because stress and tension are such predictable causes of cellulite, it's important to learn how to really "let go" – to totally relax your mind and body. Time devoted to relaxation is especially important after every exercise session. And it's paramount to make relaxation a way of live because it equalizes circulation, works to loosen up overtaxed muscles and facilitates release of toxic substances.

The first thing is to slow down. Actions will become less jerky, thinkingwill become deeper and more rational. Energy, not expended needlessly, can be called on for situations in which it is really needed. This includes the following:

1-- Gaining respiratory control in order to breathe smoothly and evenly.

2-- Loosening the diaphragm by doing special exercises.

3-- Learning how to voluntarily decontract muscles.

4-- Improving circulation.

Learning how to relax requires good discipline and regular practice. There are many different techniques. Here are two of the most classic. Try them both and see which suits you best. They are equally good and can be done easily enough by anyone. Total Relaxation

1. By using your head alone, as your body is stretched out, you can easily relax.

Lie flat on your back, preferably on a hard surface such as a carpeted floor or exercise mat. Close your eyes. Place your arms straight along your body, with hands falling naturally in a half-open position (palms facing up or down, depending upon what is natural to you). Keep legs apart with toes pointing outward.

Now, concentrate on your toes by thinking just about them and trying to feel them, yet without moving them. Tell your toes to become limp. Order them to relax. Do this for a few seconds.

Next, concentrate on your feet to the exclusion of all other parts of your body. Order them to become limp and relax. Now do the same thing with your ankles and work up the entire body by concentrating on one part at a time: Legs, knees, thighs, abdomen, buttocks, back, chest, hands, arms, shoulders, neck and finally the face – mouth, eyes and forehead. Every part should be completely relaxed and free of tension. Your entire body will feel limp and quite heavy.

Now you must clear your mind – reduce your thoughts to an absolute minimum, especially those that cause tension. Breathe deeply and slowly. After a few minutes, you will be completely and blissfully relaxed.

2. By using your head and body together, you have another way to relax.

The second relaxation exercise is similar to the first. But instead of just thinking about each area of the body, you actually contract or thighten that area, holding it for a moment before LETTING GO. This produces the limp, heavy feeling that leads to total relaxation. Again, work on each area of your body from the toes up.

You will probably have to practice for a few weeks before you will be able to reach a state of relaxation rapidly. In the beginning, it will take from 10 to 25 minutes to relax. As you train yourself, however, it will come quite quickly -- almost instantly.

When you are tired, your inclination is to sleep. You need sleep to "recharge your batteries," regain your strength, maintain your equilibrium. Without sleep, you cannot go on for very long.

Nutritional factors known to contribute to sound sleep are calcium and Vitamins B and D. Some of the B vitamins which have a soothing effect on the nervous system can be found in wheat germ, brewers' yeast, liver and molasses. Dark molasses, milk and yogurt are all good sources of both calcium and Vitamin D.

A glass of fortified warm milk containing two teaspoons of dark molasses is an excellent sedative drink to take before bedtime. You can prepare fortified milk by adding one or two tablespoonfuls of powdered skim milk to a glass of fresh milk. If you are particularly tense, take two calcium tablets with the warm milk and molasses.

Right before going to sleep, take a dozen complete breaths in front of an open window.

Always be sure your room remains well-ventiltated.

A bath is very relaxing. It relieves tension, calms the nerves and is a marvelous preparation for good night's sleep.

Take advantage of your bath, making it a real beauty treat, not just a way to get clean. Give yourself as much time as possible. Enjoy it. Practice the Total Relaxation exercise. And always remember that baths should be warm, not hot. Hot water tends to dry the skin, making it saggy in due time.

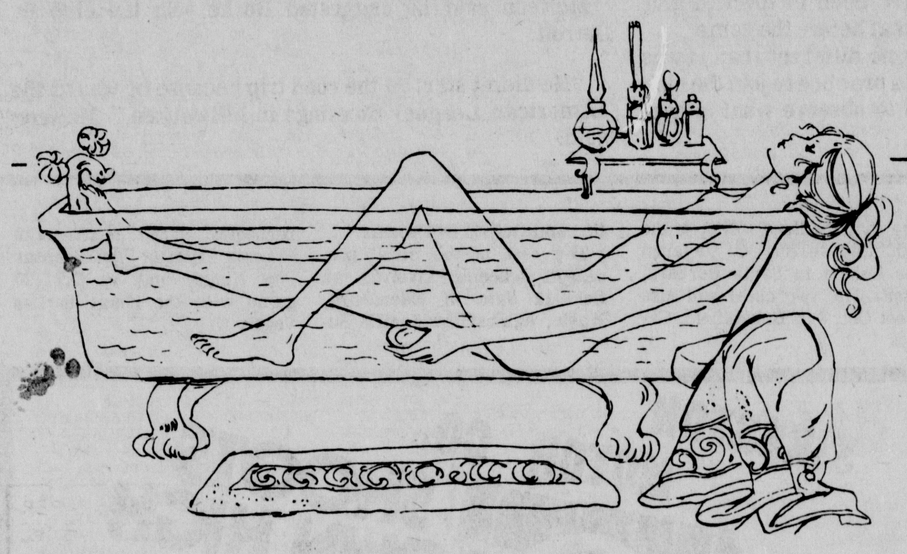

The following baths are particularly beneficial for cellulite control:

Sea bath at home: You can actually take a sea bath at home by dissolving several handfuls of natural sea salt in a tub of warm water and relaxing for 20 minutes. This salt has a high concentration of sea minerals, good for reducing tension and fatigue as they work toward breaking down cellulite.

Seaweek bath: Seaweed, because of its iodine content, is exceptionally good in combatting cellulite. Simply put fresh dried seaweed, tied loosely in a piece of cheese cloth, in into a warm tub. (If you like, you can add some pine needles to give the bath a pleasant aroma.) While in the tub, squeeze the seaweed bag the way you would a sponge, to release its beneficial properties, and rub it on your cellulite lumps. Soak as long as you like -- the longer the better!

The correct methods have been set down in every phase of cellulite control. So now you have all the information you need to fight your cellulite problem. You can use it in any way that best fits your life.

To get the most from the program, you must really want to solve your problem. It's best to work out a personal schedule that allows you maximum time for exercise and massage. With practice, you'll learn to do your cellulite routine in no time! Think positively. Work slowly but surely. You con control cellulite. But it's up to you.

Special meeting scheduled

Members of the Rebekah Lodge will meet at 8 p.m. Friday in the Oddfellows Hall for a draping of te charter.

Household hints

Those familiar round marks accumulate more often these summer days on just about any wood surface where people plop down a can, bottle or glass of liquid refreshment. To remove the marks quickly and easily, use a light spray of an aerosol. You may have to rub a bit with a soft, lint-free cloth but simple surface stains will come right off it caught in time.

The no-fault wardrobe

In trying to pull a wardrobe together for my vacation, I ran into an incredible phenomenon – the pre-planned, no-fault, can't-miss, color-coordinated basic wardrobe.

"This," said the salesperson, "is the Weekender. It has four basic pieces that will take you from a super casual afternoon to a formal evening. And here is the Fortnighter. It's an 11-piece coordinated collection designed to meet all the fashion requirements of a two-week cruise. This, of course, is the Around The World In 80 Days and 44 Pounds. It's 22 pieces that combine to make 156 outfits."

"This little stack of clothes weighs 44 pounds?" I asked.

"Of course not. The clothes only weigh 8 pounds. There's a 36-pound can of deodorant that comes with it."

"How does it work?" I asked.

"You just press the nozzle and ..."

"Not the deodorant! The wardrobe!"

"Simple. Here is your basic pants suit. Take offthe blouse, add the vest and you're ready for polo. Take off the slacks, put on the shorts and you're dressed for bicycling. Zip the lining into the shorts, add the halter and it's a bathing suit. Take the straps off the halter and it's a bra. Add a short skirt and you're ready for tennis.

"Now, turn the blouse inside out and it's a bathrobe. Turn down the cuffs on the slacks, take the belt off the overblouse and you're in your jammies."

"It certainly is versatile," I stammered.

"Versatile! Look at the accessories. This elasticized halter can get you a sun tan, but when pulled down over the hips is a girdle. Now, slip into the evening skirt, slip on this veil, and you're ready to be married. Or, slap a monogram on the jacket and you can pass for a member of the U.S. Olympic Chess team. The long skirt is plastic-lined. If you have to, you could convert it into a tent and live out of it for a week. Or snap out the sleeves i nthe overblouse and it's a caftan.

"Take off the scarf, roll down the sleeves of the blouse, put in on backwards, take off your underwear and it's a hospital gown. Trust me, there are enough combinations to mix and match for 80 days."

"What's this?" I asked picking up a small plastic kit.

"That's a kerosene and the box of matches for the 81st day or when the deodorant runs out . . . whichever comes first."

The venus fly trap snaps shut its leaves on an insect and then kills it with a charge of electricity.

Inflation tips cut costs

Think about economics when you're placing a water heater. The farther water has to travel in a pipe from the heater to where it will be used, the more expensive it is.

Suggest that your builder install water heaters closer to laundry facilities, kitchens and bathrooms.

When insulating around electrical receptacles, be sure to use extra insulation behind the receptable box to help cut down on air drafts.

If paneling is used, caulking the space between the receptacle and the paneling will help eliminate air drafts around the receptacle.

Household hints

Labels will tell if a ham needs to be fully cooked or just heated and served. Read the label to see if the water has been added to cure the ham. If so, be sure and not overcook the ham. It will lose the flavor and shrink.

Ann Landers

'Victim' says divorce can be quick and beneficial

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that because a child has divorced parents he is referred to as a "victim" for the rest of his life?

I am one of those so-called victims and I don't feel victimized at all. I'm happy, and probably better-adjusted than most of my friends who have both parents.

Would it have been better if my parents had stayed together under false pretenses? Many of my friends' parents fight constantly, cheat on each other right out in the open and live phony lives to "protect the children."

Why not let them be happy "victims" instead of neurotic children who cringe at the sound of the yelling? If handled properly, a divorce need not be a trauma to children. It's over and done with quickly. Those daily hassles and "Daddy's three-week business trips" do a lot of damage and they last a long time in a child's mind.

I'm the victim of a plastic, narrow-minded society. My home was never broken. My life was never shattered. I don't hate men, I'm just more alert to the pitfalls and the seriousness of marriage.--Better For It

Dear Better: I believe it--especially after having seen some of those children whose parents stayed together "for their sake." Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are having a disagreement and we want you to settle it. We have two daughters, 13 and 14, and an 11-year-old son. I work evenings and Harry is supposed to watch the children. That's the problem. He watches them too well. Especially the girls.

When my daughters take their showers, Harry always finds some excuse to putter in the bathroom. The younger girl complained to me about this. When I mentioned it to Harry, he said the older girl didn't mind at all, in fact she seemed to enjoy it.

What do you think about this, Ann Landers?--Mother Of Three

Dear Mother: I think you'd better get a daytime job and stay home evenings. And if there's no lock on your bathroom door, you'd better get one.

Dear Ann Landers: Five years ago my husband took an oath that he would quit smoking. I smell smoke on his breath every night after supper when he returns from "a walk." There are always bits of tobacco in his pockets. I find butts floatiing in the john. Ashes appear on the rugs. When I hint that I smell smoke he says, "You're imagining things."

This man has actually bragged in my presence that he has "kicked the habit" and feels so much better. Then he has the nerve to say, "If I can quit, so can you!" He often turns to me and asks me to verify his statements. I feel like the south end of a horse going north.

All the while I've played along, thinking he would smoke less if he had to sneak, but it's beginning to get to me. What would YOU do, Ann?--Pained In Painesville

Dear P.' I'd do exactly what you've been doing--let the fool go on kidding himself. Unmasking him would serve no useful purpose.

Cellulite
Learn how to relax

By NICOLE RONSARD
This is the last of a six-part series.

Learning how to relax is very important in cellulite control. Because stress and tension are such predictable causes of cellulite, it's important to learn how to really "let go" – to totally relax your mind and body. Time devoted to relaxation is especially important after every exercise session. And it's paramount to make relaxation a way of live because it equalizes circulation, works to loosen up overtaxed muscles and facilitates release of toxic substances.

The first thing is to slow down. Actions will become less jerky, thinkingwill become deeper and more rational. Energy, not expended needlessly, can be called on for situations in which it's really needed. This includes the following:

1-- Gaining respiratory control in order to breathe smoothly and evenly.

2-- Loosening the diaphragm by doing special exercises.

3-- Learning how to voluntarily decontract muscles.

4-- Improving circulation.

Learning how to relax requires good discipline and regular practice. There are many different techniques. Here are two of the most classic. Try them both and see which suits you best. They are equally good and can be done easily enough by anyone. Total Relaxation

1. By using your head alone, as your body is stretched out, you can easily relax.

Lie flat on your back, preferably on a hard surface such as a carpeted floor or exercise mat. Close your eyes. Place your arms straight along your body, with hands falling naturally in a half-open position (palms facing up or down, depending upon what is natural to you). Keep legs apart with toes pointing outward.

Now, concentrate on your toes by thinking just about them and trying to feel them, yet without moving them. Tell your toes to become limp. Order them to relax. Do this for a few seconds.

Next, concentrate on your feet to the exclusion of all other parts of your body. Order them to become limp and relax. Now do the same thing with your ankles and work up the entire body by concentrating on one part at a time: Legs, knees, thighs, abdomen, buttocks, back, chest, hands, arms, shoulders, neck and finally the face – mouth, eyes and forehead. Every part should be completely relaxed and free of tension. Your entire body will feel limp and quite heavy.

Now you must clear your mind -- reduce your thoughts to an absolute minimum, especially those that cause tension. Breathe deeply and slowly. After a few minutes, you will be completely and blissfully relaxed.

2. By using your head and body together, you have another way to relax.

The second relaxation exercise is similar to the first. But instead of just thinking about each area of the body, you actually contract or thighten that area, holding it for a moment before LETTING GO. This produces the limp, heavy feeling that leads to total relaxation. Again, work on each area of your body from the toes up.

You will probably have to practice for a few weeks before you will be able to reach a state of relaxation rapidly. In the beginning, it will take from 10 to 25 minutes to relax. As you train yourself, however, it will come quite quickly -- almost instantly.

When you are tired, your inclination is to sleep. You need sleep to "recharge your batteries," regain your strength, maintain your equilibrium. Without sleep, you cannot go on for very long.

Nutritional factors known to contribute to sound sleep are calcium and Vitamins B and D. Some of the B vitamins which have a soothing effect on the nervous system can be found in wheat germ, brewers' yeast, liver and molasses. Dark molasses, milk and yogurt are all good sources of both calcium and Vitamin D.

A glass of fortified warm milk containing two teaspoons of dark molasses is an excellent sedative drink to take before bedtime. You can prepare fortified milk by adding one or two tablespoonfuls of powdered skim milk to a glass of fresh milk. If you are particularly tense, take two calcium tablets with the warm milk and molasses.

Right before going to sleep, take a dozen complete breaths in front of an open window.

Always be sure your room remains well-ventiltated.

Take advantage of your bath, making it a real beauty treat, not just a way to get clean. Give yourself as much time as possible. Enjoy it. Practice the Total Relaxation exercise. And always remember that baths should be warm, not hot. Hot water tends to dry the skin, making it saggy in due time.

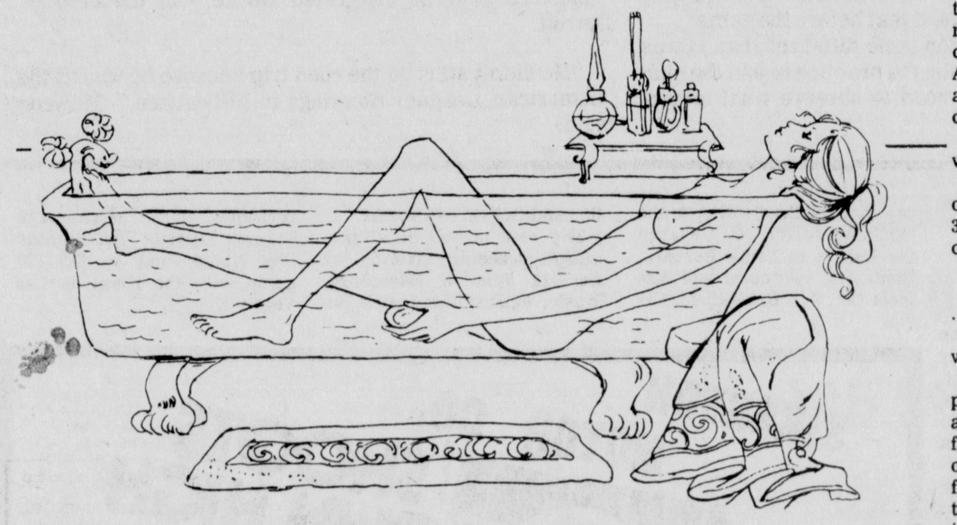

The following baths are particularly beneficial for cellulite control:

Sea bath at home: You can actually take a sea bath at home by dissolving several handfuls of natural sea salt in a tub of warm water and relaxing for 20 minutes. This salt has a high concentration of sea minerals, good for reducing tension and fatigue as they work toward breaking down cellulite.

Seaweek bath: Seaweed, because of its iodine content, is exceptionally good in combatting cellulite. Simply put fresh dried seaweed, tied loosely in a piece of cheese cloth, in into a warm tub. (If you like, you can add some pine needles to give the bath a pleasant aroma.) While in the tub, squeeze the seaweed bag the way you would a sponge, to release its beneficial properties, and rub it on your cellulite lumps. Soak as long as you like -- the longer the better!

The correct methods have been set down in every phase of cellulite control. So now you have all the information you need to fight your cellulite problem. You can use it in any way that best fits your life.

To get the most from the program, you must really want to solve your problem. It's best to work out a personal schedule that allows you maximum time for exercise and massage. With practice, you'll learn to do your cellulite routine in no time! Think positively. Work slowly but surely. You con control cellulite. But it's up to you.

Household hints

Those familiar round marks accumulate more often these summer days on just about any wood surface where people plop down a can, bottle or glass of liquid refreshment. To remove the marks quickly and easily, use a light spray of an aerosol. You may have to rub a bit with a soft, lint-free cloth but simple surface stains will come right off it caught in time.

Special meeting scheduled

Members of the Rebekah Lodge will meet at 8 p.m. Friday in the Oddfellows Hall for a draping of te charter.

At Wit's end
The no-fault wardrobe

In trying to pull a wardrobe together for my vacation, I ran into an incredible phenomenon – the pre-planned, no-fault, can't-miss, color-coordinated basic wardrobe.

"This," said the salesperson, "is the Weekender. It has four basic pieces that will take you from a super casual afternoon to a formal evening. And here is the Fortnighter. It's an 11-piece coordinated collection designed to meet all the fashion requirements of a two-week cruise. This, of course, is the Around The World In 80 Days and 44 Pounds. It's 22 pieces that combine to make 156 outfits."

"This little stack of clothes weighs 44 pounds?" I asked.

"Of course not. The clothes only weigh 8 pounds. There's a 36-pound can of deodorant that comes with it."

"How does it work?" I asked.

"You just press the nozzle and ..."

"Not the deodorant! The wardrobe!"

"Simple. Here is your basic pants suit. Take offthe blouse, add the vest and you're ready for polo. Take off the slacks, put on the shorts and you're dressed for bicycling. Zip the lining into the shorts, add the halter and it's a bathing suit. Take the straps off the halter and it's a bra. Add a short skirt and you're ready for tennis.

"Now, turn the blouse inside out and it's a bathrobe. Turn down the cuffs on the slacks, take the belt off the overblouse and you're in your jammies."

"It certainly is versatile," I stammered.

"Versatile! Look at the accessories. This elasticized halter can get you a sun tan, but when pulled down over the hips is a girdle. Now, slip into the evening skirt, slip on this veil, and you're ready to be married. Or, slap a monogram on the jacket and you can pass for a member of the U.S. Olympic Chess team. The long skirt is plastic-lined. If you have to, you could convert it into a tent and live out of it for a week. Or snap out the sleeves i nthe overblouse and it's a caftan.

"Take off the scarf, roll down the sleeves of the blouse, put in on backwards, take off your underwear and it's a hospital gown. Trust me, there are enough combinations to mix and match for 80 days."

"What's this?" I asked picking up a small plastic kit.

"That's a kerosene and the box of matches for the 81st day or when the deodorant runs out . . . whichever comes first."

The venus fly trap snaps shut its leaves on an insect and then kills it with a charge of electricity.

Inflation tips cut costs

Think about economics when you're placing a water heater. The farther water has to travel in a pipe from the heater to where it will be used, the more expensive it is.

Suggest that your builder install water heaters closer to laundry facilities, kitchens and bathrooms.

When insulating around electrical receptacles, be sure to use extra insulation behind the receptable box to help cut down on air drafts.

If paneling is used, caulking the space between the receptacle and the paneling will help eliminate air drafts around the receptacle.

Household hints

Labels will tell if a ham needs to be fully cooked or just heated and served. Read the label to see if the water has been added to cure the ham. If so, be sure and not overcook the ham. It will lose the flavor and shrink.

Ann Landers
'Victim' says divorce can be quick and beneficial

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that because a child has divorced parents he is referred to as a "victim" for the rest of his life?

I am one of those so-called victims and I don't feel victimized at all. I'm happy, and probably better-adjusted than most of my friends who have both parents.

Would it have been better if my parents had stayed together under false pretenses? Many of my friends' parents fight constantly, cheat on each other right out in the open and live phony lives to "protect the children."

Why not let them be happy "victims" instead of neurotic children who cringe at the sound of the yelling? If handled properly, a divorce need not be a trauma to children. It's over and done with quickly. Those daily hassles and "Daddy's three-week business trips" do a lot of damage and they last a long time in a child's mind.

I'm the victim of a plastic, narrow-minded society. My home was never broken. My life was never shattered. I don't hate men, I'm just more alert to the pitfalls and the seriousness of marriage.--Better For It

Dear Better: I believe it--especially after having seen some of those children whose parents stayed together "for their sake." Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are having a disagreement and we want you to settle it. We have two daughters, 13 and 14, and an 11-year-old son. I work evenings and Harry is supposed to watch the children. That's the problem. He watches them too well. Especially the girls.

When my daughters take their showers, Harry always finds some excuse to putter in the bathroom. The younger girl complained to me about this. When I mentioned it to Harry, he said the older girl didn't mind at all, in fact she seemed to enjoy it.

Rangers fire Billy Martin

DETROIT (AP) — Jack McKeon, whose job as manager of the Kansas City Royals — according to some reports — is in jeopardy, said he hated to see Texas Ranger Manager Billy Martin get fired Monday.

"I think he's done a good job there," McKeon said.

"You always hate to see it. But everybody's got their reasons."

Both General Manager Jim Campbell and Manager Ralph Houk of the Detroit Tigers had little or no comment on the firing of ex+Tiger Manager Martin.

"I don't worry about those things. That's none of my problem. I know very little about that situation," said Houk, who replaced the fiery Martin as manager of the Tigers before last season.

Campbell, who fired Martin, said only: "I have no comment."

McKeon, meanwhile, said he hasn't heard anything about the possibility of his being fired.

"I don't worry about that stuff," he said.

Kansas City was riding a sixgame losing streak before beating Detroit 3-2 Monday night.

Joe Burke, executive vice president and general manager of the Royals, was in attendance and there was some speculation he might have been in town to give McKeon the axe. Burke denied that before the game.

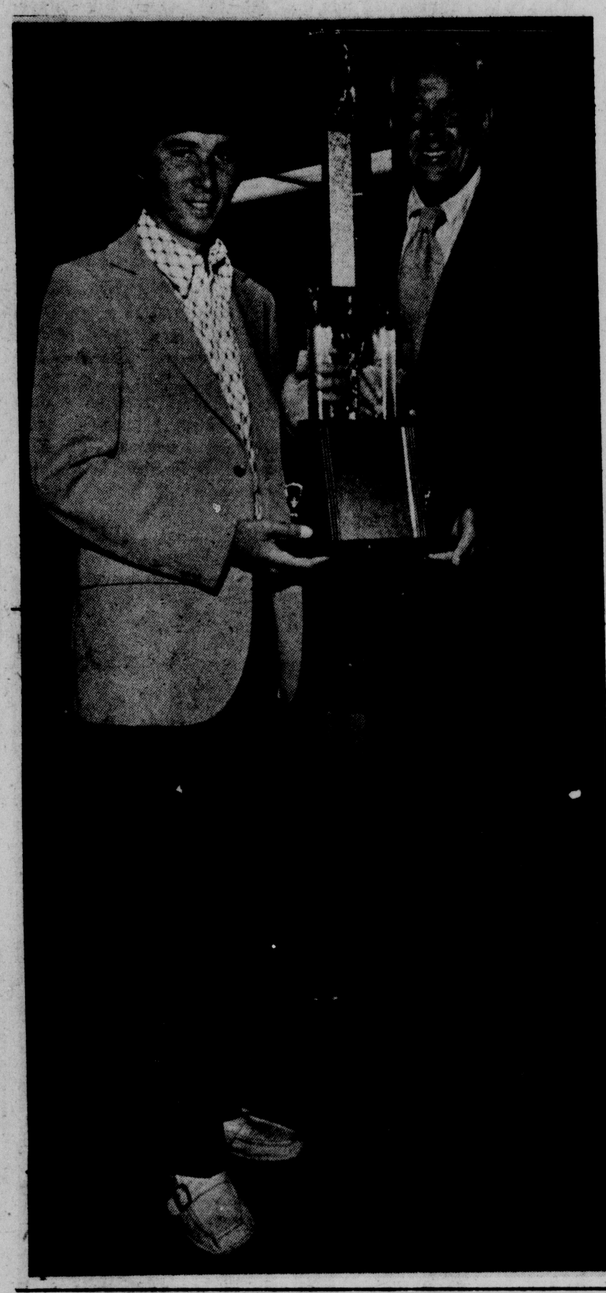

"The managerial situation is no different than it was yesterday," he said. "I make it a practice to join the club from time to time on the road to observe what is happening.

"I've watched the games that have been on TV. I've listened to the radio accounts and I've read the stories in the paper. Now I want to see for myself.

"We have lost six in a row and I just want to see how our players and our team are performing. I've talked with Jack on the phone about some of our problems, but when you're losing I think it's important to be around the team. I just want to assess our club."

McKeon said he suggested Burke join the club in Detroit.

"He didn't start on the road trip because he was at the (American League) meetings in Milwaukee," McKeon said.

Tom Dawson, winner of the 1974 Bank of Sikeston invitational golf tournament championship class, poses with bank executive Clem Beal and the tournament's traveling trophy. This years tournament will be held this weekend at the Sikeston Country Club course with competition in five classes. Dawson shot a 138 four under par to claim the title. To retain the traveling trophy, a golfer must win the tournament three times in a row.

Briefs

By The Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The University of Michigan basketball team will leave July 31 for a 15-day tour of Egypt, university officials said Monday.

The team will play eight games during the trip and participate in three basketball clinics in several Egyptian cities. Ten players will make the trip, along with a student manager and head coach Johnny Orr, assistant coach John Dutcher and their wives.

The NCAA-approved trip is sponsored by the U.S. State Department and the People to People Sports Committee, officials said. The tour is financed through private contributions.

Japan, which is undefeated in the tournament, won 15-6, 15-1, 15-6 over the Soviets.

Canada was defeated 3-1 by the United States in another match.

The tournament continues today in Winnipeg.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association will play six preseason games this fall — half of them against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Club officials announced Monday that the Suns will open the exhibition season Oct. 1 against the Lakers in Santa Barbara, Calif. The two clubs will also meet Oct. 8 in Bakersfield, Calif., and Oct. 11 in Phoenix.

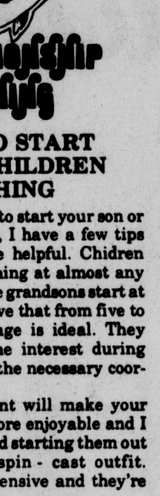

The rest of the Suns' preseason schedule involves an Oct. 12 date in Ellensburg, Wash., against the Seattle SuperSonics; an Oct. 18 contest in Phoenix against the Kansas City Kings; and an Oct. 20 game with the Kings in Las Vegas, Nev.

TIPS TO START YOUR CHILDREN FISHING

If you're about to start your son or daughter fishing, I have a few tips that might prove helpful. Chidren can start out fishing at almost any age. I've had some grandsons start at three, but I believe that from five to seven years of age is ideal. They seem to have the interest during those years and the necessary coordination.

Good equipment will make your child's fishing more enjoyable and I would recommend starting them out with a simple spin - cast outfit. These aren't expensive and they're simple to operate.

Virgil Ward

Since the child will probably end up with a rod and reel, it makes it nice if they can start out with something other than a willow and cork.

Your local tackle shop can show you the beginner sets they have available. These sets are usually made up of a fiberglass or metal rod and closed - faced spin casting reel containing four or six pound test line.

Go over the equipment with your child so that they are familar with how to hold the rod and how the thumb lever works on the reel.

Practice comes next. I've found a good method is to place a tire or basket out in the back yard, say 20 yards out and let the youngster try throwing a practice plug, or one that has had the hooks removed. It may not be as much fun as actually fishing, but the practice will make his first trip more enjoyable!

After the practice has developed some degree of accuracy it's time for a trip to a nearby farm pond or lake or stream.

I prefer to start children out with articial bait as it eliminates throwing live bait off the hook on beginning casts.

When your youngster ties into his first fish he should be aware that the rod should do the work. Pressure should be maintained on the line at all times to keep his trophy from shaking the hook.

When a fish is making a long run it's best to keep the rod high, letting it do the work. When the fish stops its run, the child should raise the rod tip and reel in steadily. This action should be repeated if the fish makes additional runs.

Make certain your child checks around for other fishermen before starting his cast. Instruct them to always take with them any paper or cans they've had on the bank. Proper habits at the start will develop into practices for a lifetime.

Good luck with your fishing!

Barnes signs

CHARLESTON, Ill. (AP) — "Pete's back in the fold and I'm happy to have him. He knows where he belongs."

So said Director of Operations Joe Sullivan Monday after linebacker Pete Barnes ended his 2½-month hiatus as a free agent and signed with the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League.

"I had expected him Friday and expected him again Saturday," said Sullivan.

The 6-foot-1, 240-pound Barnes, described by Sullivan as the "key man among three unsigned veterans," is scheduled to report Saturday to the Cardinals' training camp at Eastern Illinois University.

Still unsigned are cornerback Norm Thompson and defensive lineman Dave Butz, who also played out their options May 1. Sullivan said both were in a state of limbo.

"We've got standing offers with both of them,' he acknowledged.

The number of players in camp rose to 43 Monday as wide receiver Gary Hammond checked in early.

Rangers fire Billy Martin

DETROIT (AP) — Jack McKeon, whose job as manager of the Kansas City Royals — according to some reports — is in jeopardy, said he hated to see Texas Ranger Manager Billy Martin get fired Monday.

"I think he's done a good job there," McKeon said.

"You always hate to see it. But everybody's got their reasons."

Both General Manager Jim Campbell and Manager Ralph Houk of the Detroit Tigers had little or no comment on the firing of ex+Tiger Manager Martin.

"I don't worry about those things. That's none of my problem. I know very little about that situation," said Houk, who replaced the fiery Martin as manager of the Tigers before last season.

Campbell, who fired Martin, said only: "I have no comment."

McKeon, meanwhile, said he hasn't heard anything about the possibility of his being fired.

"I don't worry about that stuff," he said.

Kansas City was riding a sixgame losing streak before beating Detroit 3-2 Monday night.

Joe Burke, executive vice president and general manager of the Royals, was in attendance and there was some speculation he might have been in town to give McKeon the axe. Burke denied that before the game.

"The managerial situation is no different than it was yesterday," he said. "I make it a practice to join the club from time to time on the road to observe what is happening.

"I've watched the games that have been on TV. I've listened to the radio accounts and I've read the stories in the paper. Now I want to see for myself.

"We have lost six in a row and I just want to see how our players and our team are performing. I've talked with Jack on the phone about some of our problems, but when you're losing I think it's important to be around the team. I just want to assess our club."

McKeon said he suggested Burke join the club in Detroit.

"He didn't start on the road trip because he was at the (American League) meetings in Milwaukee," McKeon said.

Tom Dawson, winner of the 1974 Bank of Sikeston invitational golf tournament championship class, poses with bank executive Clem Beal and the tournament's traveling trophy. This years tournament will be held this weekend at the Sikeston Country Club course with competition in five classes. Dawson shot a 138 four under par to claim the title. To retain the traveling trophy, a golfer must win the tournament three times in a row.

TIPS TO START YOUR CHILDREN FISHING

If you're about to start your son or daughter fishing, I have a few tips that might prove helpful. Chidren can start out fishing at almost any age. I've had some grandsons start at three, but I believe that from five to seven years of age is ideal. They seem to have the interest during those years and the necessary coordination.

Good equipment will make your child's fishing more enjoyable and I would recommend starting them out with a simple spin - cast outfit. These aren't expensive and they're simple to operate.

Virgil Ward

Since the child will probably end up with a rod and reel, it makes it nice if they can start out with something other than a willow and cork.

Your local tackle shop can show you the beginner sets they have available. These sets are usually made up of a fiberglass or metal rod and closed - faced spin casting reel containing four or six pound test line.

Go over the equipment with your child so that they are familar with how to hold the rod and how the thumb lever works on the reel.

Practice comes next. I've found a good method is to place a tire or basket out in the back yard, say 20 yards out and let the youngster try throwing a practice plug, or one that has had the hooks removed. It may not be as much fun as actually fishing, but the practice will make his first trip more enjoyable!

After the practice has developed some degree of accuracy it's time for a trip to a nearby farm pond or lake or stream.

I prefer to start children out with articial bait as it eliminates throwing live bait off the hook on beginning casts.

When your youngster ties into his first fish he should be aware that the rod should do the work. Pressure should be maintained on the line at all times to keep his trophy from shaking the hook.

When a fish is making a long run it's best to keep the rod high, letting it do the work. When the fish stops its run, the child should raise the rod tip and reel in steadily. This action should be repeated if the fish makes additional runs.

Make certain your child checks around for other fishermen before starting his cast. Instruct them to always take with them any paper or cans they've had on the bank. Proper habits at the start will develop into practices for a lifetime.

Good luck with your fishing!

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The University of Michigan basketball team will leave July 31 for a 15-day tour of Egypt, university officials said Monday.

The team will play eight games during the trip and participate in three basketball clinics in several Egyptian cities. Ten players will make the trip, along with a student manager and head coach Johnny Orr, assistant coach John Dutcher and their wives.

The NCAA-approved trip is sponsored by the U.S. State Department and the People to People Sports Committee, officials said. The tour is financed through private contributions.

TORONTO (AP) — Japan continued its domination of the international Olympic-class women's volleyball tournament with a 3-0 victory over the Soviet Union at Maple Leaf Gardens Monday.

Japan, which is undefeated in the tournament, won 15-6, 15-1, 15-6 over the Soviets.

Canada was defeated 3-1 by the United States in another match.

The tournament continues today in Winnipeg.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association will play six preseason games this fall — half of them against the Los Angeles Lakers.

The rest of the Suns' preseason schedule involves an Oct. 12 date in Ellensburg, Wash., against the Seattle SuperSonics; an Oct. 18 contest in Phoenix against the Kansas City Kings; and an Oct. 20 game with the Kings in Las Vegas, Nev.

Vanduser wins 26th

Rick O'Donald continued to rack up the wins for Vanduser in the Southeast Missouri Fast Pitch Softball Association, pitching a five hitter in defeating Kelso 4-2 Sunday night.

O'Donald not only turned in the top pitching performance, but also helped himself at the plate, connecting for a two run triple in the second inning and scoring himself.

Wayne Limbaugh connected for a solo homer in the fifth, his seventh of the season, to end Vanduser's scoring and secure the teams 26th victory in 36 games this season. In the league, Vanduser is 13-7.

Ken Russell was the loswer, allowing six hits. He also paced his teams hitting with two safties.

Vanduser plays at New Hamburg Wednesday and goes to Oran Friday.

In other fast pitch league action last week, Vanduser edged Benton 3-2 and the New Hamburg Blues defeated the Benton Aces 9-6. Otto Kern homered for the Blues biggest hit of the night.

Womens softball

Bell City, Oran, and Morehouse continue to battle for first-place in the Morehouse Invitational Women's Softball Tournament as tourney action resumes tonight due to rain-delayed games.

Oran eliminated Vanduser 26-20 Saturday night and will face the loser of tonight's 6:30 Morehouse-Bell City game in the 8:30 showing. The winners of tonight's games will square-off Wednesday in the championship game at 7:30, with the presentation of trophies following.

Card rookie hurls shutout

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The night should have belonged to Harry Rasmussen. The 23-yearold St. Louis right-hander made his major league debut, blanked San Diego with a seven-hitter, 4-0, and even singled home a run, but something even more unusual happened.

Catcher Ted Simmons of the Cardinals hit a home run that was disallowed and everyone agreed that they had never seen that happen before.

"I have to give John McNamara (the San Diego manager) credit for doing his home work," Simmons said Monday night after his leadoff homer in the fourth inning was voided because he was using an illegal bat. McNamara contended the bat had grooves cut into the fat end of it and, on inspection, plate umpire Art Williams upheld that ruling.

PREP RODEO

The 1975 Missouri State High School Championship Rodeo proved to be the largest in the 20 year history of the event. The Tarkio Rodeo Grounds was the site for the annual rodeo held June 27, 28 and 29. Ninety six members of the Missouri State High School Rodeo Association traveled from all parts of the state to contest in two full go-rounds of competition in fourteen events.

An estimated crowd of five-thousand attended the three nightly performances and were treated to the fine bucking stock of the Papstein Rodeo Company of Norfolk, NB. Art and Addie Fritcher of Henderson, Iowa were presented at each performance as the 1975 Rodeo Honoree. Prior to the Saturday rodeo, the Fritchers were presented a citation by Board President, Chick Swope, in recognition of their outstanding contributions to the youth rodeo program in the state.

The Student Association of the MSHSRA conducted their general membership meeting on June 28 and elected the following officers for the coming year: Scott Fogg, Mound City – President; Steve Keith, Belton – Vice-President; Ginger Cooper, Oak Grove – Secretary-Treasurer. A barbeque sponsored by Bob's Billiards and Grannies Ice Cream Parlor of Tarkio served close to 500 people prior to the last performance. Competition was very stiff through out the entire course of the rodeo and spectators witnessed the closest race ever in both All Around categories. With the conclusion of the final performance, the 1975 Champions were announced. The top four finishers in each event are eligible to compete at the National High School Rodeo Finals in Gallup, New Mexico, August 4-10.

Members of the Missouri High School Rodeo Team will be leaving shortly for the 1975 National High School Rodeo Finals to be held in Gallup, New Mexico, August 4-10. The National Rodeo will host over 900 contestants from 28 states and 2 Canadian provinces. All contestants have qualified for the Finals by placing in the top four in oneof fourteen rodeo events held at the State-Provincial Finals. The Missouri State High School Championship Rodeo Finals were held in Tarkio the last weekend of June. The young cowboys and cowgirls will be conteating in two full go-rounds of competition during the thirteen performances of the rodeo, vying for national honors, buckles, saddles, trophies and scholarships.

Roger MaBrey, St. Louis; Denise Lawrence, Tarkio; Mark Adams, Blue Springs; Kathy Thomas, Kansas City; Sherry Shaw, Harrisonville; Linda Hotley, Appleton City; Mindy Peery, Lee's Summit; Randol Hager, Green City; Ginger Cooper, Oak Grove; Rosalie Mills, Kingsville; Dusty Kraus, Fenton; Dan McGee, Bridgeton; Gerald Bittle, Rich Hill; Scott Fogg, Mound City; Phyllis Crouse, St. Joseph; Ed Spire, Maryville; Robert Johnson, Poplar Bluff; Jim Bob Wilson, Odessa;

Mike Mast, Kansas City; Maralee Sweeton, Rock Port; Tom Kennedy, Milan; Scott Clement, Skidmore; Mike Thompson, Fulton; Benton Whitaker, Iberia; Marlene Walter, Rock Port; Randall Russell, Green Castle; Kendall Russell, Green Castle; Mark Weddle, Hatfield; Agnes Derr, Oregon.

What promises to be one of the most interesting races of the 57-day Ellis Park meeting at Henderson, Ky., is scheduled for Saturday, July 26. It is the Regaey Island Handicap designed for three-year-olds and upward over six furlongs for a purse of $6,000.

"This race should draw an attractive field," said secretary Donald Richardson who will attempt to dead beat the horses with his weight assignments.

R.B. Harden's Eager Wish may draw the top impost. The six-year-old son of Scud won the Brentwood Purse in the fastest time of the meeting, 1:11 three fifths, to boost his earnings for the year over the $40,000 mark.

Others likely to compete in the race are W.G. Franks' Rule Four, Busler Enterprises' Gun Buddy, Albert Risin-Paxton Price's King of Rome, Fanning Farm's Sound Investment, A.L. Oxford's Stormy Drive, Mrs. George Humphrey's Search Tradition, Attica Farm's Deaman Dad, W. Gambill's Tampa Gent, Jack Defee's Big Gig and J. White-O. Range's Naughty Thoughty.

Regaey Island was created in the fertile mind of the late Charles Triplett, long time secretary here, by spelling President Lester E. Yeager's name backward. The island was appropriate as the track was located on an island until the Ohio River shifted its course.

President Yeager is well pleased with the progress of the meeting. There has been a slight increase in wagering over the comparable portion of the 1974 meeting and a record handle for the 15th straight year seems in the offing.

Through July 16, James McKnight led the riding brigade with 18 wins. Agapito Pablo was just two back with LeRoy Tauzin, the 1974 leader, two back. Greg Lynn, Gene Solomon, Julio Espinoza and R.A. Jones were within quick striding distance.

Ken Burkhart and D.E. Hughes were tied at seven each for training honors. Everett Hammond and Bobby LaRue were next with six winners followed by C.R. Mitchell, Angel Montano and Bill Corrigan with five each.

Safety conference slated

COLUMBIA — Addresses by Gov. Chritopher S. Bond, Attorney General John C. Danforth and FBI Director Clarence M. Kelly will highlight the Governor's Conference on Public Safety to be held July 28-29 at the Ramada Inn.

Criminal justice professionals, public officials and private citizens from throughout Missouri are expected to attend this conference, which will mark the beginning of a program to develop a Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety (MAPPS). The MAPPS program will seek to identify ways of reducing crime and delinquency in Missouri and improving the state system of criminal justice.

The general public may attend the governor's conference, beginning at 1 p.m. July 28.

The first day of the governor's conference will provide participants with information on the background and significance of the Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety.

The second day of the conference will be devoted to working sessions of task forces that have been established in six areas: police, courts, adult corrections, juvenile delinquency, criminal justice information systems and community crime prevention.

Sikeston teen tours Britain

Cadet Sanderson is one of approximately 200 young CAP members from all parts of the country who, with their adult escorts, are participating in the exchange. The exchange is sponsored in the United States each summer by Civil Air Patrol and the U.S. Air Force.

Under the program, the CAP cadets will visit one or the other of some 22 nations which are sharing in the exchange this year. At the same time, young people from those same countries will visit the United States as guests of CAP and the Air Force.

The CAP cadets and their escorts departing from Washington will visit the European area or Canada. At the same time, other cadets were leaving San Francisco to visit the Far East and the Pacific area.

The IACE was initiated in 1948 by Civil Air Patrol and the Air Cadet League of Canada as a means of promoting international goodwill, understanding and friendship among the world's young people through a common interest in aviation. Most of he young people are members of aviation-orineted organizations.

Civil Air Patrol cadets and their counterparts from other nations are selected for the exchange on the basis of their leadership qualities, character, academic achievements and citizenship. Many of today's leaders in the aerospace community, both here and abroad, are former participants in IACE.

Over the years, more than 40 countries have participated in the annual exchange.

While visiting other lands, the cadets see many things off the beaten path which tourists miss and have an opportunity to stay in private homes, meet local people and associate with other young people and get a close look at the life and customs of other peoples.

The cadets are expected to return home on Aug. 6.

Civil Air Patrol is the civilian auxiliary of the U. S. Air Force, with national headquarters at Maxwell AFB, Ala. It is a non-profit, benevolent organization whose members are all volunteers.

Cadet Sanderson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Weldon T. Sanderson of 709 Mimosa Drive, Sikeston.

Salvation Army to administer $250,000 estate trust fund

ST. LOUIS — The Salvation Army has been named to administer the Augusta Walter Trust, an estimated $250,000 fund left by a German-American whose heart was torn by news of the suffering in her homeland under the Nazis, the havoc wrought by Allied bombing during World War II, and the displacement of people after the war.

Augusta Walter, who died in Los Angeles in 1972, set up the trust fund in her will "for the benefit of distressed persons of German nationality," particularly those injured, orphaned or left destitute by war and those displaced or persecuted since then.

The board of directors of the Western Territory of The Salvation Army is under a court-imposed 18-month deadline to disburse the money to applicants needing food, housing, medical care, the education of children, or protection in old age.

Fifty thousand dollars has already been allocated to West Germany and Berlin for use in Salvation Army rehabilitation centers there. Commissioner Richard E. Holz, Western territorial commander, plans to visit Germany next year to determine whether an additional $50,000 will be disbursed through the same channels.

Applicants for aid will be carefully screened, Commissioner Holz stated, and wherever possible the help given will be designed to rehabilitate rather than give temporary relief. Salvation Army social workers throughout the Missouri-Southern Illinois area will process requests to Western Territorial Headquarters in San Francisco via their St. Louis and Chicago offices.

Augusta Walter was born in Pomerania, now part of East Germany in 1876. She came to Chicago as a young girl and worked at Marshall Field's for several years. She was married to Joseph Friedheim in 1905, but resumed her maiden name after his death in 1937, two years after they had moved to Los Angeles.

In her will she left $5,000 to The Salvation Army in Los Angeles, and it was this expression of her confidence in the organization's ability to help people in need that prompted the court to appoint The Salvation Army to administer the Augusta Walter Trust.

Judge appoints juvenile officer

CARUTHERSVILLE — Circuit Court Judge William Ragland has appointed Troy McCulloch, 24, of Portageville Route Two as the new assistant juvenile officer of the 34th Judicial Circuit, replacing Rev. Tom Martin.

Martin resigned last month to accept a call to become the assistant to the Rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Bryn Mawr, Pa. He had been the juvenile officer since Feb. 14, 1972.

Until 1972, only one juvenile officer, Jimmie Joe Bloomfield, covered Pemiscot and New Madrid counties. After he arrived, Martin primarily handled juvenile cases in this county while Bloomfield handled cases in New Madrid County.

Since the time Martin resigned, the deputy juvenile officer, Mrs. Kate Smith, handled the office. Now she will assist the new juvenile officer, McCulloch.

The new juvenile officer officially assumed his duties Tuesday. He spent most of the day becoming familiar with the office and the files. He spent some time going over juvenile case procedure with Bloomfield and Mrs. Smith.

McCulloch said he sought the job "because I like kids and like to work with young people, helping them in any way I can." He said he has had past experience working with kids in groups, such as baseball teams, classroom teaching, etc.

"It will be a challenging job, I know, but a challenge I welcome," he remarked. "Right now I don't have any programs planned or any ideas of changes since I'm just getting acquainted with this position."

McCulloch went to Three Rivers Junior College for two years and to Southwest Missouri State University for two years. He majored in physical education.

He and his wife, Deborah Elaine, have one child. Courtney Nelaine, six and a half months old.

New service for older persons is available in area

Senior citizens may call telephone number 471-4992 when there is a question that needs answered. A new service for older persons has been established in this area to help people with a problem or to give information on some question, and since it has been operating, a variety of calls has been received.

Questions like: Where to secure a large-print Bible for an elderly lady who is homebound. Another inquired whether there was an organization that would provide a hearing air for a friend that lived in a nursing home. Is there a pass for seniors to U.S. parks for camping?

Trained volunteers at this telephone number will help to answer questions that have puzzled older persons or will try to find the answers if possible.

Dr. Lamb

Heart stimulus is blocked

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — While I was in the hospital for surgery I had an electrocardiogram (ECG), and the surgeon said I had a right bundle branch block. My family doctor repeated it and said I had a conduction defect, a cholesterol problem. My cholesterol test was within the normal limits. My doctor said the conduction defect was a minor thing and many people have this finding for years, and I shouldn't worry. He put me on Atromid-S three times a day, told me to watch the fats in my diet and come back in six months for another ECG.

I am a 53-year-old male, apparently in good health otherwise, except for slightly elevated blood pressure. My weight is normal, and I do not smoke. I would appreciate your explanation of this and the risks to my health.

DEAR READER — Right bundle branch block means a defect in the nerve-like fibers that carry the electrical stimulus to the right side of the heart for each beat. It doesn't significantly affect the heart function. Its importance depends solely on what causes it. And, to make matters more confusing, it is a conduction defect. Many minor conduction defects are sometimes classified (not always correctly) as right bundle branch block or "incomplete bundle branch block."

I saw a large number of right bundle branch block cases, and many more so-called incomplete types, in the U.S. Air Force flying population when I studied them over a 10-year span. In many instances these were in young, healthy men with no heart disease at all. It can be a birth defect, or from a minor inflammation of the heart from a childhood disease, or it can be the result of fatty deposits in the arteries that cause heart attacks. So, it can be something or nothing. Its importance must be judged on other medical findings.

Your cholesterol may be normal by some values but apparently your doctor thought the level was important enough to warrant giving you medicine to try to lower it. Elevated cholesterol is one of the important factors that increases the risk of having a heart attack.

For more information on the significance of cholesterol levels, send me 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019 and ask for The Health Letter number 1-2 on cholesterol.

Your elevated blood pressure is another important risk factor. It makes any mild elevation of the cholesterol even more important. The fact that you don't smoke is a plus, and your risk is less by as much as a factor of three compared to a moderate or heavy cigarette smoker with the same other findings.

I recognize that you think you have no weight problem. However, if you have any significant amounts of fat at all under your skin around the small of the back, you might do a lot for yourself by losing weight. Many people with moderate elevations of blood pressure have perfectly normal pressure when they eliminate even small amounts of fat that they may consider normal.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In order to maintain a normal potassium level, I have been eating an average of one banana per day. Is there any possible adverse reaction to the eating of bananas over a period of time?

DEAR READER — No. An average-sized banana contains about 100 calories. Bananas are a good source of potassium and so are most fruits. They are very low in sodium and are essentially fat-free. The only possible problem would be from eating large amounts regularly to the point of eating too many calories, but you could do that with almost any food.

Teddy will not be a candidate, his mother says

HYANNISPORT, Mass. (AP) — Rose Kennedy, mother of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, says she can foresee no circumstances that might persuade her son to run for president in 1976.

"Teddy has taken himself out of the presidential candidacy," she said in an interview published Sunday in a Boston newspaper, the Sunday Herald Advertiser.

"There is no point in discussing politics since Teddy has taken himself out of the presidential thing," Mrs. Kennedy said.

Washington report

Energy: change a must

By STUART SYMINGTON
U.S. Senator: Missouri

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As we are all aware, a serious and continuing energy problem exists in this country. The two fuels which supply three-fourths of our energy needs, oil and gas, are becoming more and more expensive as we have to drill deeper on our own land, in the ocean beds or import more quantities for our often wasteful consumption.

Largely untapped energy sources available in this country – coal, shale, nuclear, solar, hydro and solid wastes -- are not being developed or utilized to the extent possible.

If we are to be a land of opportunity and relative plenty in the future, we need to meet our energy problems. Conservation, research, development and production activities must be better coordinated through leadership and cooperation of government, business and consumers.

At the same time we develop and conserve our limited oil and gas resources we need to move more aggressively to new, abundant domestic fuel resources, avoid emphasizing one fuel over all others and open up new choices for the future.

While a major shift in the primary form of energy used by our country will be difficult, it is imperative that we do so. Since 1776, we have made two such basic shifts, first from wood fuels in the mid-1800s to coal in the 1900s and from coal to oil and gas, each taking some 60 years to complete.

This time we do not have 60 years to change our fuel habits.

In order to help our country better adjust to different forms of energy, the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), authorized by the last Congress has submitted a broad energy program to this Congress. Proposals for the short-, mid- and long-term sections are included.

In the short-term, the report recommends preserving and expanding our major existing energy systems, including coal, light water nuclear fission reactors and gas and oil from new sources and better recovery techniques. ERDA also suggests increased efforts to conserve and increase the efficiency of fuel-to-energy conversion use and extraction of more usable energy from waste materials.

In the mid-term, between 1985 and 2000, ERDA reports we will have to be ready to accelerate the use of new processes to produce synthetic fuels from coal and to extract oil from shale. The utilization of such presently unused or underused energy sources as geothermal, solar heating and cooling and waste heat is also urged.

Priorities ERDA sees for the long-term are the use of essentially inexhaustible resources such as the nuclear breeder, nuclear fusion, solar, wind and thermal power.

In addition to the above, ERDA progrrams will examine the tremendous potential for our state of the now wasted power of the Missuri and Mississippi rivers. I am urging that ERDA start research anddevelopment programs on low head hydro.

Presently available technologies need to be developed and refined before they can be put into wide use. Working together, however, we must move ahead. Decisions need to be made and priorities set by the Administration, by Congress and by state and local governments as well as in the private sector.

Governments must join business and consumers to provide adequate financial and public support for research, development and construction to meet the energy challenge of America's future.

What's the law?

The case of the revolutionary law

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

A group of crime-fighting city officials decided to clean up the streets, and enacted an antilittering ordinance. In effect, the ordinance prohibited door-to-door distribution of any kind of literature without first obtaining permission from the home owner. The idea was to prevent unwanted handbills, posters, circulars, booklets, etc. from being crinkled up and tossed into the street by the annoyed home owner.

Claiming that the ordinance would curb their activities, several political protesters attacked the legality of the ordinance in court.

"It's stupid," they argued. "How are we supposed to obtain the consent of home owners to leave our material until they have first had an opportunity to read what we have to say. Obviously, until they've read it, they don't know if they're for or agin us. Consequently, the ordinance violates our freedom of speech."

"While a person may have a constitutional right to speak," was the answer, "he doesn't have a constitutional right to litter. Nor does he have a right to force his ideas upon anyone else. Therefore, the ordinance doesn't interfere with anyone's perogatives and is perfectly valid."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you strike down the anti-littering ordinance as being unconstitutional?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that courts have long recognized that, in practice, house to house distribution of written material constitutes one of the principal means of implementing the First Amendment right of communication and it may not be prohibited. If the ordinance had been in force in eighteenth century America, noted the judge, the colonies may very well have preserved the cleanliness of their streets only at the price of stilling the dissident voices of such pamphleteers as Thomas Paine, Andrew Eliot and John Carmichael.

Heart stimulus is blocked

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — While I was in the hospital for surgery I had an electrocardiogram (ECG), and the surgeon said I had a right bundle branch block. My family doctor repeated it and said I had a conduction defect, a cholesterol problem. My cholesterol test was within the normal limits. My doctor said the conduction defect was a minor thing and many people have this finding for years, and I shouldn't worry. He put me on Atromid-S three times a day, told me to watch the fats in my diet and come back in six months for another ECG.

I am a 53-year-old male, apparently in good health otherwise, except for slightly elevated blood pressure. My weight is normal, and I do not smoke. I would appreciate your explanation of this and the risks to my health.

DEAR READER — Right bundle branch block means a defect in the nerve-like fibers that carry the electrical stimulus to the right side of the heart for each beat. It doesn't significantly affect the heart function. Its importance depends solely on what causes it. And, to make matters more confusing, it is a conduction defect. Many minor conduction defects are sometimes classified (not always correctly) as right bundle branch block or "incomplete bundle branch block."

I saw a large number of right bundle branch block cases, and many more so-called incomplete types, in the U.S. Air Force flying population when I studied them over a 10-year span. In many instances these were in young, healthy men with no heart disease at all. It can be a birth defect, or from a minor inflammation of the heart from a childhood disease, or it can be the result of fatty deposits in the arteries that cause heart attacks. So, it can be something or nothing. Its importance must be judged on other medical findings.

Your cholesterol may be normal by some values but apparently your doctor thought the level was important enough to warrant giving you medicine to try to lower it. Elevated cholesterol is one of the important factors that increases the risk of having a heart attack.

For more information on the significance of cholesterol levels, send me 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019 and ask for The Health Letter number 1-2 on cholesterol.

Your elevated blood pressure is another important risk factor. It makes any mild elevation of the cholesterol even more important. The fact that you don't smoke is a plus, and your risk is less by as much as a factor of three compared to a moderate or heavy cigarette smoker with the same other findings.

I recognize that you think you have no weight problem. However, if you have any significant amounts of fat at all under your skin around the small of the back, you might do a lot for yourself by losing weight. Many people with moderate elevations of blood pressure have perfectly normal pressure when they eliminate even small amounts of fat that they may consider normal.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In order to maintain a normal potassium level, I have been eating an average of one banana per day. Is there any possible adverse reaction to the eating of bananas over a period of time?

DEAR READER — No. An average-sized banana contains about 100 calories. Bananas are a good source of potassium and so are most fruits. They are very low in sodium and are essentially fat-free. The only possible problem would be from eating large amounts regularly to the point of eating too many calories, but you could do that with almost any food.

Teddy will not be a candidate, his mother says

HYANNISPORT, Mass. (AP) — Rose Kennedy, mother of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, says she can foresee no circumstances that might persuade her son to run for president in 1976.

"Teddy has taken himself out of the presidential candidacy," she said in an interview published Sunday in a Boston newspaper, the Sunday Herald Advertiser.

"There is no point in discussing politics since Teddy has taken himself out of the presidential thing," Mrs. Kennedy said.

Washington report

Energy: change a must

By STUART SYMINGTON
U.S. Senator: Missouri

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As we are all aware, a serious and continuing energy problem exists in this country. The two fuels which supply three-fourths of our energy needs, oil and gas, are becoming more and more expensive as we have to drill deeper on our own land, in the ocean beds or import more quantities for our often wasteful consumption.

Largely untapped energy sources available in this country – coal, shale, nuclear, solar, hydro and solid wastes -- are not being developed or utilized to the extent possible.

If we are to be a land of opportunity and relative plenty in the future, we need to meet our energy problems. Conservation, research, development and production activities must be better coordinated through leadership and cooperation of government, business and consumers.

At the same time we develop and conserve our limited oil and gas resources we need to move more aggressively to new, abundant domestic fuel resources, avoid emphasizing one fuel over all others and open up new choices for the future.

While a major shift in the primary form of energy used by our country will be difficult, it is imperative that we do so. Since 1776, we have made two such basic shifts, first from wood fuels in the mid-1800s to coal in the 1900s and from coal to oil and gas, each taking some 60 years to complete.

This time we do not have 60 years to change our fuel habits.

In order to help our country better adjust to different forms of energy, the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), authorized by the last Congress has submitted a broad energy program to this Congress. Proposals for the short-, mid- and long-term sections are included.

In the short-term, the report recommends preserving and expanding our major existing energy systems, including coal, light water nuclear fission reactors and gas and oil from new sources and better recovery techniques. ERDA also suggests increased efforts to conserve and increase the efficiency of fuel-to-energy conversion use and extraction of more usable energy from waste materials.

In the mid-term, between 1985 and 2000, ERDA reports we will have to be ready to accelerate the use of new processes to produce synthetic fuels from coal and to extract oil from shale. The utilization of such presently unused or underused energy sources as geothermal, solar heating and cooling and waste heat is also urged.

Priorities ERDA sees for the long-term are the use of essentially inexhaustible resources such as the nuclear breeder, nuclear fusion, solar, wind and thermal power.

In addition to the above, ERDA progrrams will examine the tremendous potential for our state of the now wasted power of the Missuri and Mississippi rivers. I am urging that ERDA start research anddevelopment programs on low head hydro.

Presently available technologies need to be developed and refined before they can be put into wide use. Working together, however, we must move ahead. Decisions need to be made and priorities set by the Administration, by Congress and by state and local governments as well as in the private sector.

Governments must join business and consumers to provide adequate financial and public support for research, development and construction to meet the energy challenge of America's future.

The Prayer

"Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." (Ephesians 4:32)

PRAYER : O Lord, help us to remember from Proverbs, "A soft answer turneth away wrath: but grievous words stir up anger." Amen.

What's the law?

The case of the revolutionary law

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

A group of crime-fighting city officials decided to clean up the streets, and enacted an anti-littering ordinance. In effect, the ordinance prohibited door-to-door distribution of any kind of literature without first obtaining permission from the home owner. The idea was to prevent unwanted handbills, posters, circulars, booklets, etc. from being crinkled up and tossed into the street by the annoyed home owner.

Claiming that the ordinance would curb their activities, several political protesters attacked the legality of the ordinance in court.

"It's stupid," they argued. "How are we supposed to obtain the consent of home owners to leave our material until they have first had an opportunity to read what we have to say. Obviously, until they've read it, they don't know if they're for or agin us. Consequently, the ordinance violates our freedom of speech."

"While a person may have a constitutional right to speak," was the answer, "he doesn't have a constitutional right to litter. Nor does he have a right to force his ideas upon anyone else. Therefore, the ordinance doesn't interfere with anyone's perogatives and is perfectly valid."

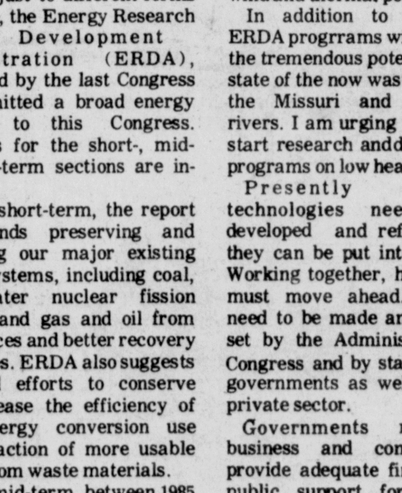

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you strike down the anti-littering ordinance as being unconstitutional?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that courts have long recognized that, in practice, house to house distribution of written material constitutes one of the principal means of implementing the First Amendment right of communication and it may not be prohibited. If the ordinance had been in force in eighteenth century America, noted the judge, the colonies may very well have preserved the cleanliness of their streets only at the price of stilling the dissident voices of such pamphleteers as Thomas Paine, Andrew Eliot and John Carmichael.

There is already a baseball diamond at the park, she said, but that it is really just dirt without lights or bleachers.

The plan is to develop the diamond for smaller children and they probably won't know whether they can get the fund for several weeks.

She said that even if they get the money for the diamond here is still the problem of who will pay the light bill.

Judge Louie Hirschowitz said Board of Equalization meetings went smoothly last week, and everyone seemed satisfied.

SOLAR HEATING IS ON THE RISE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Recent studies made for the National Science Foundation indicate that solar heating and cooling systems can become competitive in most regions of the nation in 10 to 15 years. The amount of fuel saved by using solar energy would rise slowly, reaching 50 million barrels of oil per year by 1990.

The government is setting policies for the growing use of solar energy devices expected by the mid-1980s.

Most of the emphasis would be on techniques of using the sun for single homes and buildings.

approved purchase of a desk and chairs for the city clerk's office and voted to have a veterinarian visit Chaffee to vaccinate dogs for rabies.

The resignation of Jim Wehmeyer as coordinator of civil defense was accepted.

The council voted to submit the actual use report of revenue sharing for newspaper publication before Sept. 1 as required by law.

A lawn mower will be bought for the maintenance crew at the city cemetery.

Two employes of the water department were allotted $75 each to attend classes on water treatment.

Reports at the next meeting were asked on the need of a fire plug at the shopping center being built on Highway 77 and whether the city could put up a gate or chain to keep people from going up a road leading to the cross overlooking the town. Parties at the cross have resulted in damages to the area.

Also, the feasibility of making all door-to-door solicitors obtain a permit from the city will be checked into at the next meeting.

Scott City council accepts truck bid

SCOTT CITY--A bid from Cape GMC Pontiac Inc. of Cape Girardeau to provide a three-quarter ton pickup truck was accepted Monday night by the City Council.

Bids for resurfacing Ellis Street will be resubmitted, City Clerk Ada Davis said.

Rose Con Co. requested that Louie Street be renamed Rose Con Street. No action was taken.

Representatives of the park board gave figures to the council on costs for building a tennis court and a golf driving range for the city. The tennis court would cost $12,309 and the driving range $454. The men were asked to return when more council members were present.

New Madrid council agrees on oiling levy road

NEW MADRID--The City Council approved a 3.2 per cent beer license, agreed to oil the levy road on the south side of the city and heard reports at a short session Monday night.

Sammy Lee Gardner was authorized a 3.2 per cent beer license for the premises located at 601 Russell St. to be called The New Madrid Tavern in the building known as the Luther Cook building. He will be required to first obtain state and county approval for the license.

In her report, City Clerk Pauline Allen showed that in the previous month the police court submitted $565 in total fines and 18 cases were tried.

The Council agreed to oil the levy road adjoining the south end of town with used oil which has been made available from the industrial park.

In a discussion of the progress of park and recreation improvements, Mayor Jim Cravens told the council that the city's request for matching funds, through to have been approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, had developed problems.

He stated that apparently HUD had cut in half its allowance for the city's portion of the O'Bannon School Property which it had previously credited the city for $29,000 and now HUD is only going to allow one-half that amount for the program.

A meeting of the park board was called for Friday at 3:30 p.m. in the city hall for discussion of the problem and representatives from HUD and the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission have been requested to attend. The meeting is an open meeting and citizens are requested to attend.

In other reports city administrator Don Lloyd reported that since the July 7 meeting when it was stated that 24 notices for removal had been placed on disabled motor vehicles, 11 of them had been removed, five will be moved this week and two have been repaired.

The other six owners will be served with arrest warrants.

Lloyd was authorized to negotiate for the purchase from Ed LaValle a vacant lot located on Mott Street just across from the Municipal Light and Power Building. The lot is about 65 feet by 65 feet and would be used for customer and employe parking if purchased.

Mayor Cravens and Loyd will attend a meeting Thursday at the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission office in Malden for discussion of the city's request for nearly $300,000 in grants from the Community Block Grant Program for street, drainage and sewage improvements.

Property tax inequities under study by Lehr

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—State Auditor George Lehr says he plans to file a suit against the Missouri State Tax Commission to prevent it from increasing property tax assessments from 30 per cent to 33 per cent of assessed valuation.

"Preliminary results from our state study show that no one has been assessing property at the 30 per cent level," Lehr told the Associated Press Monday.

He said the tax commission's order requiring an increase in valuation to 33 per cent, "only compounds the present inequities."

A Missouri statute which went into effect Jan. 1 requires the 33 per cent assessment, and since the previous rate was set at 30 per cent, the commission required all of the state's 114 counties to boost rates by about 11 per cent.

Lehr's office began an audit of the assessing procedures in each of the state's counties, and the auditor said the 11 per cent increase compounds the error that they were initially assessed at 30 per cent.

If three houses were assessed unequally at $100, $200 and $300, Lehr said, then the assessed valuation increase would amount to $11, $22 and $33 respectively. Thus, the auditor noted, the man paying the most would get the greatest increase.

He said the results of the property tax rate study would be available in mid-August, and that a suit against the commission would be filed on the basis of those results. Lehr said he would seek out private attorneys to file the suit based on the results of his office's study.

The suit would complicate an already confusing situation, which finds individual county assessors trying to meet the commission's 33 per cent requirement without reassessing all the parcels of property within individual counties.

Tax Commission Chairman James E. Riney said he did not know what effect such a suit might have, but he said such a court action should be made against individual taxing bodies rather than the commission.

He noted that a state statute provides that taxing bodies such as school districts use lower tax rates whenever the assessed valuation has increased more than 10 per cent.

Riney said taxpayers should take advantage of the rollback, since ever county in the state, with the exception of the city of St. Louis, has increased 10 per cent or more over the last year's valuation.

Asked about whether or not the counties had originally been at the 30 per cent valuation, Riney said: "We've been proclaiming that they haven't for the 5½ years I've been here. We're all aware of that. That's no revelation."

He agreed that the increase to 33 per cent "was being done in an inequitable manner," but said that if governmental subdivisions do their job properly, tax levies should be reduced.Lehr said his suit would be the simplest way of resolving the dispute over the property tax rates.

"If we do not stop it now and the rollbacks are not made, then there will be massive property tax payments under protest," Lehr said. "Why not have one action trying to knock out the inequity?"

What's needed, Lehr said, is a statewide reassessment, which could cost about $25 million.

Riney said that about 45 to 50 per cent of the state's counties came up with the necessary increases in valuation. He said orders were sent to the remainder, requiring them to comply with the law.

He said the property tax assessments in 35 Missouri counties have been equalized over the past 5 years and that six more will become so through the 11 per cent increase.

Sikeston CB Club to donate $3,000 for special olympics

The Sikeston Area CB Club will soon donate $3,000 to the Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic. The money represents proceeds from the citizens band radio club's first jamboree held Saturday at Sikeston Junior High School.

About 2,000-2,500 people attended the festivities, which began at 10 a.m. and lasted until midnight. Money was raised by selling chances on more than 100 prizes donated by area merchants and a sideband mobile radio, base radio and portable television set provided by the club.

The Mayfield, Ky., club won the trophy for the citizens band club which traveled the longest distance to attend the jamboree. The Crossroads Citizens Band Club of Bloomfield won a trophy for having the most members present. Paul J. Sherrard of Morehouse won a trophy for being the oldest licensed CBer present.

The grand prize, a sideband mobile radio, was presented to James Warren of Charleston following a drawing. Joe Williams of Sikeston won the second prize, a base radio; and John Hill of Bertrand won a portable television set, the third prize.

James Bauer, a student at the Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic, drew the names.

Between presentations of prizes throughout the day, Hal Mark McDonald of Matthews provided organ music. Also included at the jamboree were radio displays.

Another money-making project for the club was a jail, for which a patron could pay to have someone else put in jail for 10 minutes. If the person chose not to go to jail, he could pay to stay out. Joe Childress, "Warthaug" of Sikeston, chairman of the jamboree, said the club raised about $100 just from that project.

The Good Times provided music for the dance from 9 p.m. to midnight.

Serving with Childress on the jamboree committee were Ginny Childress, "Little Egypt"; Sandra Gish, "Hoosier Kid";; Dr. Billy Scoch, "Playboy"; Bob Dyer, "Snap-on"; Deanna Mayes, "Gypsy Lady"; Wanda Leonard, "Miss T-bird"; Larry Lawrence, "Bozo"; and Bill Leonard, "Pipefitter", president of the club.

The club plans to sponsor the event each year.

Childress extended a special thanks to all local merchants who donated gifts for door prizes and helped make the event a success.

A lawn mower will be bought for the maintenance crew at the city cemetery.

Two employes of the water department were allotted $75 each to attend classes on water treatment.

Reports at the next meeting were asked on the need of a fire plug at the shopping center being built on Highway 77 and whether the city could put up a gate or chain to keep people from going up a road leading to the cross overlooking the town. Parties at the cross have resulted in damages to the area.

Also, the feasibility of making all door-to-door solicitors obtain a permit from the city will be checked into at the next meeting.

Scott City council accepts truck bid

SCOTT CITY--A bid from Cape GMC Pontiac Inc. of Cape Girardeau to provide a three-quarter ton pickup truck was accepted Monday night by the City Council.

Bids for resurfacing Ellis Street will be resubmitted, City Clerk Ada Davis said.

Rose Con Co. requested that Louie Street be renamed Rose Con Street. No action was taken.

Representatives of the park board gave figures to the council on costs for building a tennis court and a golf driving range for the city. The tennis court would cost $12,309 and the driving range $454. The men were asked to return when more council members were present.

NEW MADRID--The City Council approved a 3.2 per cent beer license, agreed to oil the levy road on the south side of the city and heard reports at a short session Monday night.

Sammy Lee Gardner was authorized a 3.2 per cent beer license for the premises located at 601 Russell St. to be called The New Madrid Tavern in the building known as the Luther Cook building. He will be required to first obtain state and county approval for the license.

In her report, City Clerk Pauline Allen showed that in the previous month the police court submitted $565 in total fines and 18 cases were tried.

The Council agreed to oil the levy road adjoining the south end of town with used oil which has been made available from the industrial park.

In a discussion of the progress of park and recreation improvements, Mayor Jim Cravens told the council that the city's request for matching funds, through to have been approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, had developed problems.

He stated that apparently HUD had cut in half its allowance for the city's portion of the O'Bannon School Property which it had previously credited the city for $29,000 and now HUD is only going to allow one-half that amount for the program.

A meeting of the park board was called for Friday at 3:30 p.m. in the city hall for discussion of the problem and representatives from HUD and the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission have been requested to attend. The meeting is an open meeting and citizens are requested to attend.

In other reports city administrator Don Lloyd reported that since the July 7 meeting when it was stated that 24 notices for removal had been placed on disabled motor vehicles, 11 of them had been removed, five will be moved this week and two have been repaired.

The other six owners will be served with arrest warrants.

Lloyd was authorized to negotiate for the purchase from Ed LaValle a vacant lot located on Mott Street just across from the Municipal Light and Power Building. The lot is about 65 feet by 65 feet and would be used for customer and employe parking if purchased.

Mayor Cravens and Loyd will attend a meeting Thursday at the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission office in Malden for discussion of the city's request for nearly $300,000 in grants from the Community Block Grant Program for street, drainage and sewage improvements.

Property tax inequities under study by Lehr

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—State Auditor George Lehr says he plans to file a suit against the Missouri State Tax Commission to prevent it from increasing property tax assessments from 30 per cent to 33 per cent of assessed valuation.

"Preliminary results from our state study show that no one has been assessing property at the 30 per cent level," Lehr told the Associated Press Monday.

He said the tax commission's order requiring an increase in valuation to 33 per cent, "only compounds the present inequities."

A Missouri statute which went into effect Jan. 1 requires the 33 per cent assessment, and since the previous rate was set at 30 per cent, the commission required all of the state's 114 counties to boost rates by about 11 per cent.

Lehr's office began an audit of the assessing procedures in each of the state's counties, and the auditor said the 11 per cent increase compounds the error that they were initially assessed at 30 per cent.

If three houses were assessed unequally at $100, $200 and $300, Lehr said, then the assessed valuation increase would amount to $11, $22 and $33 respectively. Thus, the auditor noted, the man paying the most would get the greatest increase.

He said the results of the property tax rate study would be available in mid-August, and that a suit against the commission would be filed on the basis of those results. Lehr said he would seek out private attorneys to file the suit based on the results of his office's study.

The suit would complicate an already confusing situation, which finds individual county assessors trying to meet the commission's 33 per cent requirement without reassessing all the parcels of property within individual counties.

Tax Commission Chairman James E. Riney said he did not know what effect such a suit might have, but he said such a court action should be made against individual taxing bodies rather than the commission.

He noted that a state statute provides that taxing bodies such as school districts use lower tax rates whenever the assessed valuation has increased more than 10 per cent.

Riney said taxpayers should take advantage of the rollback, since ever county in the state, with the exception of the city of St. Louis, has increased 10 per cent or more over the last year's valuation.

Asked about whether or not the counties had originally been at the 30 per cent valuation, Riney said: "We've been proclaiming that they haven't for the 5½ years I've been here. We're all aware of that. That's no revelation."

He agreed that the increase to 33 per cent "was being done in an inequitable manner," but said that if governmental subdivisions do their job properly, tax levies should be reduced.Lehr said his suit would be the simplest way of resolving the dispute over the property tax rates.

"If we do not stop it now and the rollbacks are not made, then there will be massive property tax payments under protest," Lehr said. "Why not have one action trying to knock out the inequity?"

What's needed, Lehr said, is a statewide reassessment, which could cost about $25 million.

Riney said that about 45 to 50 per cent of the state's counties came up with the necessary increases in valuation. He said orders were sent to the remainder, requiring them to comply with the law.

He said the property tax assessments in 35 Missouri counties have been equalized over the past 5 years and that six more will become so through the 11 per cent increase.

Sikeston CB Club to donate $3,000 for special olympics

The Sikeston Area CB Club will soon donate $3,000 to the Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic. The money represents proceeds from the citizens band radio club's first jamboree held Saturday at Sikeston Junior High School.

About 2,000-2,500 people attended the festivities, which began at 10 a.m. and lasted until midnight. Money was raised by selling chances on more than 100 prizes donated by area merchants and a sideband mobile radio, base radio and portable television set provided by the club.

The Mayfield, Ky., club won the trophy for the citizens band club which traveled the longest distance to attend the jamboree. The Crossroads Citizens Band Club of Bloomfield won a trophy for having the most members present. Paul J. Sherrard of Morehouse won a trophy for being the oldest licensed CBer present.

The grand prize, a sideband mobile radio, was presented to James Warren of Charleston following a drawing. Joe Williams of Sikeston won the second prize, a base radio; and John Hill of Bertrand won a portable television set, the third prize.

James Bauer, a student at the Sikeston Regional Diagnostic Clinic, drew the names.

Between presentations of prizes throughout the day, Hal Mark McDonald of Matthews provided organ music. Also included at the jamboree were radio displays.

Another money-making project for the club was a jail, for which a patron could pay to have someone else put in jail for 10 minutes. If the person chose not to go to jail, he could pay to stay out. Joe Childress, "Warthaug" of Sikeston, chairman of the jamboree, said the club raised about $100 just from that project.

The Good Times provided music for the dance from 9 p.m. to midnight.

Serving with Childress on the jamboree committee were Ginny Childress, "Little Egypt"; Sandra Gish, "Hoosier Kid";; Dr. Billy Scoch, "Playboy"; Bob Dyer, "Snap-on"; Deanna Mayes, "Gypsy Lady"; Wanda Leonard, "Miss T-bird"; Larry Lawrence, "Bozo"; and Bill Leonard, "Pipefitter", president of the club.

The club plans to sponsor the event each year.

Childress extended a special thanks to all local merchants who donated gifts for door prizes and helped make the event a success.
